POLITICAL.

Horatio Seymour on the Democratic Candidate.

A Hard Hit at the Cant About Reconciliation.

The Merchants of Philadelphia for Hartranft.

What Democratic Misrule Has Cost Delaware.

Yesterday's Political Gatherings in New-York City.

Hon. L. Bradford Prince.

In Queens County, First Assembly District, to-night, at the Town Hall, in Flushing, a meeting will be held to present to Hon. L. Bradford Prince an application signed by over 1,200 voters of the district, asking him to continue in the Assembly another year. These signatures represent all political parties, and include nearly all the leading men of the district.

Judge J. M. Van Cott will address the meeting on matters relating to the reform of the Judiciary, and Mr. Prince will make a report as to the local business of the district in the last Legislature.

Seymour and Greeley.

Horatio Seymour made a speech in favor of Horace Greeley a few days since, in the course of which he referred to the concealed correspondence of Carmichael, Greeley and Seymour with reference to making Mr. Greeley a candidate for the Presidency, paying pensions to rebels, &c. The Tribune, reporting in Seymour's speech, says: "Mr. Seymour touches slightly on the fading name of the Carmichael invention, on which the name was frequently mentioned."

But the Tribune's own report of this fitting allusion is as follows:

"I have not had any personal intercourse with Mr. Greeley, nor do I expect to have. I can only stand by and urge you to vote for him as being a man who has been one of the best masters of his country by large odds all personal pride and ambition. I would unite the people of the land, I know that some have changed that so early day he began his campaign by myself. I do not know the man who started this scheme. I only know that they do not seem to stand upon the warmth of their own words, but quality them with the epithet of 'virtual admission.' That their words were not have been believed without them. Unfortunately, they were so foolish as to undertake to read Mr. Greeley's writing. They made him to say that he was a man who was ready to undertake, but upon a more careful reading they found that Mr. Greeley had written that in 1864 Mr. Chase ought to have been nominated instead of myself. This is no hair-splitting, they came to the truth in their other assertion."

It will be noticed that Mr. Seymour is very careful not to deny having corresponded with Greeley. All that he denies is any "personal intercourse." He seems to be equally careful not to deny unless in a blind, inferential manner, any connection on his part with the purpose of the correspondence. When it is remembered that both the Tribune and Mr. Greeley have been equally careful not to give any explicit denial, and that though the letters are under their control they refuse to publish them, we think the conclusion is fair that the published abstract is about correct.

Greeley's Cant About Reconciliation.

The Buffalo Express condemns Greeley's whining cant about reconciliation as sickening, because it is a sham. It says: "There is nothing in it but pretense. An honest citizen in the crowd at Pittsburg effectually 'squelched' Mr. Greeley's entire argument in four words. The cranks on his hobby, at least, answered, exploding furiously into space as usual. 'Now, I appeal to the men of Pittsburg, I appeal to my business men, I appeal to my merchants, I appeal to her manufacturers to stop this war,' he cried. Upon which a man of Pittsburg shouted: 'It stopped that day.' That little pin let all the wind out of Mr. Greeley's great bladder with which he was to attack the Republican Party. That little pin, moreover, slew the Kaiser's hobby-horse and left the valiant hambug to flounder on as best he could. He only bestrides his steed occasionally, times again this Fall, and think he is making much generous and doing great execution; but that hobby is dead. It won't work any more. This crisis, war is over—It stopped itself yesterday."

The Merchants of Philadelphia for Hartranft.

The Philadelphia North American published a long list of the names of merchants, manufacturers, bankers and business men of that city favorable to the election of Gen. Hartranft, and said: "False charges and abuse have done their worst, and now the business men of the city are beginning to appreciate the fact that Gen. Hartranft is worthy of their every confidence. Such an array of names, selected without special revision from a list immeasurably larger, does not admit of the accusations so frequently hurled from the enemy that Hartranft is the creature of a ring, and supported only by other base and corrupt. In this list we find bankers, manufacturers, merchants and professional men—not only above reproach, but also full above reproaching, to indorse any man of whose integrity they were not thoroughly convinced."

Democratic Misrule in Delaware.

Democratic rule has cost Delaware much. And there has been in that State a case of "family government" which the hypocritical Greeley Press might fall against with some show of justice. Major James R. Lofland made a speech in Wilmington, a few nights ago, in which he revealed some of it. He said: "Delaware was free from debt in 1860, when the Democratic Party came into power, and now owes $1,109,000, which they say was a fund created to help the poor man, but which I say was the result of an unpatriotic purpose. The State has been ruled by one family, and it is high time a change was made; any change would be for the better. It would not be worse. One member of the family has been twelve years in the United States Senate; another, Governor for six years; a law partner of the twelve years' Senator has been six years Secretary of State, and now asks to be sent to Congress. Another brother has commenced a Senatorial term of six years, and a brother-in-law is now the Governor of the State." That is Democratic "nepotism," and is worthy of Mr. Sumner's attention.

Hon. Edwards Pierrepont in Philadelphia.

Hon. Edwards Pierrepont will deliver an address before the Union League of Philadelphia this evening. From the reputation of the orator, there can be no doubt that the meeting will be large, and worthy the great Republican City of Philadelphia.

The Soldiers and Sailors.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Club of the Ninth Assembly District, held a mass-meeting at No. 22 Delaney-street last evening, which was largely attended. Col. Spencer, William Gillman, Charles Semsley, Col. L. H. Rowan and Capt. R. S. Duplanty addressed the meeting. A Boston club was represented, and a large number of the German Republican organizations of the entire ward was present. The remarks of the speakers were loudly applauded and great enthusiasm was manifested.

Colored Republicans—Addresses in the Lincoln Club by Col. Thorpe, Mr. Lawson and Col. Morgan.

At a meeting of the colored Lincoln Club, at No. 12 University-place, last evening, addresses were listened to from Mr. John D. Lawson, Col. T. B. Thorpe and Col. J. R. Morgan. Mr. Lawson, the first speaker, continued his address, which was brief and to the point, to the shame of the Republican Party to their support, and the reasons why they should dread and discrust the Greeley party.

Col. Thorpe spoke enthusiastically of the faithfulness of the negroes to the Union during the war, and the help they afforded our soldiers, and told his experiences in New-Orleans.

Col. F. B. Morgan also addressed the meeting, before the adjournment, and the speakers were given a hearty vote of thanks. The gathering was remarkable for the enthusiasm and good feeling manifested.

Democratic Business in the Twenty-fourth Ward.

The Seventeenth Assembly District Grant and Wilson Club last evening raised a mammoth banner across Eighth-avenue, at the corner of Forty-third-street. The gathering attendant on the affair was very large, including many ladies, and at the windows and on the roofs of the neighboring houses were also to be seen large groups of interested spectators. The speaking was opened by Hon. Wm. Fitzpatrick, followed by Gen. W. H. Anthon, Fred. T. Locke, Chas. H. Knox, Col. Peebles and Hon. Chas. A. Flammer. Several times during the speaking a gang of roughs attempted to break up the meeting by shouting for Greeley, and during the speech of Mr. Flammer tried to get up a fight, which was promptly stopped by the Police and the offenders arrested. Col. Mason, at the close of the speeches, apologized to the meeting for the disturbance, ascribing it to its true cause, his remarks eliciting loud applause, ending in cheers for each of the speakers and for President Grant.

Grant and Wilson Banner-Raising by the Germans.

A large and enthusiastic meeting was held last night at No. 41 First-avenue in celebration of the raising of a German Grant and Wilson banner. Dr. J. Treskatis called the meeting to order and nominated Mr. P. Kher as Chairman. Mr. S. Schwartz was then elected Secretary. Mr. Kehr referred in a few words to the evident fact that the Tenth Assembly District, having done well last year in defeating the Democratic ticket, meant to do better in electing a clean Republican ticket with increased majorities. He then introduced Capt. Alex. Toplany as the first speaker, whose telling words were interrupted by frequent and loud applause. Mr. Schurzi next delivered a short address, and was followed by Dr. Treskatis, who, in a pointed manner, tore open the flimsy pretenses of the piebald conglomeration. He was followed by Mr. London, Dr. Hoeber, Col. Datum, and Mr. Lookwood. Long before this, however, it became necessary to organize an outdoor meeting, which was addressed by Col. Page, P. Kehr, and others. The banner, 40 by 20 feet, was unfurled, and it was evident that the Tenth Assembly District will give a largely-increased majority for both the national and State Republican ticket.

THE STUMP CANDIDATE.

Mr. Greeley Called on to Explain His J. Davis Bail-Bond.

He Leaves Mr. Turner in Pennsylvania—Disappointment and Fatigue Causing Him—

The Alexandrians Refuse to Invite Him to the City—He is Not Thought Worth the Cost.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

LOCK HAVEN, Sept. 26.—Mr. Greeley left Warren at 10 o'clock yesterday morning on his tramp of reconciliation in that city, which has a very strong Republican majority. Mr. Greeley's reception was anything but cordial, and no Greeley and Brown clubs greeted his coming or departure. He slept at a private house last evening, and this morning, being anxious to speak, he was compelled, of necessity, to deliver his oration from the steps of the Grant Headquarters, the Carver House, the principal hotel in the city. In the course of his address he said:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: I am somewhat in the condition of opposition to many of my old friends, and they have discovered a great many bad things in me that had not before attracted their attention. Among others I venture to say you never heard it of me till a year ago that I was a secessionist, not much better than a rebel in the late struggle. I want to say a few words, not because it is of much consequence, but because it illustrates a feature of this contest, and others like this. For twenty years, beginning with the secession of Gen. Tyler to the Presidency down to the election of Abraham Lincoln, the Government was very generally in the hands of men opposed to me, whom I conscientiously thought leaned toward slavery more than it was their duty to do. I was opposed to them because they were trying to extend and maintain slavery. In all those years of opposition on my part to the rule and policy of the country, I defy any man to pick any one sentence I ever said or uttered which was at war with the ascendency and perpetuity of our Union. Think as I was, misguided as, protesting as I did, I do not think I was ever tempted to indicate even impatience with the existence of the Union. It never seemed to me that disunion was any remedy for the evils of slavery. I know we were encountered by men who are now smiling me as a disunionist. Fred. Douglass, William Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips were then current and bitter in their denunciations of the Union as a monstrous tyranny, and the particular as a bloody chamber of death, and they said that it should be cursed over the ruins of the American Church and the American Union. I believe that at many celebrations on the 4th July they burned the Constitution to show their abhorrence of, and disregard for it. Now they call me disunionist. What pretense have they for saying so? Just this, that after my efforts had succeeded, after we had achieved power, though we had not yet clutched it, they say that I was willing to let the South go. These very men were saying all the time Gen. Dix, Gen. Butler and Gen. Winfield Scott—"If we cannot agree," they would say, "warward sisters, let them depart in peace." That sentiment has been ascribed to me. It was Gen. Winfield Scott who said it. These secession sentiments were all the time warring on the side of slavery. They said, "Rather than fight we will let them go." What I said was this. They endeavored to shut me up with this alternative: "You shall agree that the Southern half of the Territories shall be given up to slavery, or you shall be held responsible for the prosecution of a bloody civil war in this country." I tried all I could to avoid and escape the alternative of giving the Territories to slavery, which I was pledged not to do. I said "No, there is a third course open to us. I don't think the masses of the Northern people are opposed to the Union. They don't mean to get out of the Union," and I said so over and over again. Doubtless, I said such words as I might better not have said. I said things in favor of our abstract Government, as Jefferson was, "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed." I would not have said it but for the highest duty to my country. At Pittsburg, a week ago, I explained this matter, but my words were perverted by my adversaries, who made me say that I was in favor of taking a vote to see whether the Northern States would go out of the Union or not. I never had any such thought. They wanted to bully us into giving up the Territories to slavery. I proposed another course, "Let there be a fair, full discussion between the Southern people of the advantages and disadvantages of the Union, and that discussion being had, they shall take a solemn vote. If they consent to go out of the Union, I will make no further objection, let them go." I believed I was doing the most to save the Territories to slavery. I believed the Union would crew overthrow. That was my plain, Portage it was an unwise one. Perhaps it was rash for me to do so. I considered only my country, and was only desirous of saving the Union and the Territories from suffering and bloodiest condition of humanity. I still believe that ten or twenty States have right to break up this Union without the consent of the others. I always understood that our fathers formed a Government, not a mere league; that it was a union for all time; a country, not a combination—not some great mobilier or plotting concernment. Know what Madison said to Alex. Hamilton, when he proposed once, New-York not being ready to adopt the Constitution absolutely. "Suppose we get her to adopt it temporarily, with the right to recede from it if she don't like it." "Why, no, no!" replied Madison; "it must be adopted for good and all, or it is no adoption." No man understood the Constitution better than he did who assisted in its formation. What I believe and teach is that there is no power to break up the Union anywhere in any section or party or any size or strength. That matter has been settled by the arbitration of war.

Mr. Greeley was here interrupted in his speech, and asked "What he knew about bailing Jeff. Davis?" He said in reply:

Fellow-citizens: I am willing to say that I believe, in giving bail for the only prisoner left of the war, after he had been confined in jail two years, with nobody desirous of giving him a trial, though he sought it, that I performed a generous as well as genuine service to this American Republic. I believed the time had come to try him. The Constitution declares, as explicit as can be, that every man is entitled to a speedy trial by his peers. He must not be kept in jail for trial and not granted it, and I believe I have done something toward bringing the North and South together by that act. It was but one man, but there were five millions of people who felt that while that man was imprisoned they were imprisoned. Many of them hated him, believing he had been a traitor, impracticable ruler, and they were full of bitterness against him, but they said, "So long as he is in prison we are in prison with him; so long as he is held for this offence we are held also." I believe in offering bail for that man. I not only saved the Government expense which keeping him in prison involved, besides drawing him out at stated periods with an array of lawyers who never intended to prosecute him, was an unnecessary expense, but that I did good service to the country and people. May God be about my shielding him and covering him. What I did was to say: "Gentlemen, I will fetch him whenever you want him. If you want to try him I am responsible for getting him when you want him." I thought somebody should have done it. I was not in a hurry to do it, because I knew how many enemies it would get me. But I said to his counsel, "If it is necessary, and you need not any one else, I will do it." Cornelius Vanderbilt, who gave up his own million of dollars for the protection of the Union, and Gerrit Smith, the greatest Republican in the Union, put their names down for his release. I said, "If that is not enough, put down my name," and it was put down. It made me a great many enemies, but it did something toward reconciling the people and getting us together. I am glad that I was called upon, even if it were necessary to meet denunciation and persecution for that act. If there are a million of people who defended it today, there will be fewer in a year; in two years there will be still less, and in a few years there will be none; for the pastime of war has, but the memories, the necessities and affections of peace live forever.

At the several stations where Mr. Greeley passed on his way to Williamsport he was received with little enthusiasm, if not positive coldness. At Kane the only attempt at a cheer in his honor was made by a drunken loafer, who shouted, "Hurrah for Greeley; I am a Copperhead." There were no responsive cheers from the crowd, and the train was moved off quickly.

Alexandria, Va., Refuses to Invite Mr. Greeley to Visit the City.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Common Council of Alexandria, last night, after a long discussion, refused to invite Mr. Greeley to visit that city, when he comes to Baltimore. On presentation of the resolution, one Councilman moved an amendment, providing that the city shall incur no cost therefor. He said Mr. Greeley had been here several times before, and came of his own accord. Why could he not come now, without the city going to an expense to entertain him. He was more than any other candidate. Another Councilman supported and warmly sympathized with the gentleman who last spoke. Mr. Greeley was more than a common man. He was more than half a dozen men that he knew, and the people of Alexandria would do themselves honor in inviting him. Amendment was lost, and the original resolution passed, hence would, perhaps, not do to say that such a resolution to an invitation. An amendment must be presented, and that would cost a good sum, especially if good speeches were said. Finally the resolution of invitation was lost. Finally the resolution is considered entirely by Democrats.

A Tirade—The Philosopher Grows Illustrious—The People Manifest Impatience First and then Indifference.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SUNBURY, Penn., Sept. 26.—Mr. Greeley reached Williamsport, Penn., at 6½ this evening, and telegraphic dispatches having been sent to his supporters in that city announcing his coming, an immense demonstration was in anticipation. The reality was indeed discouraging. Not even the customary crowd of idlers who present themselves upon his appearance generally, awaited his arrival, and instead of cheers he was greeted with ill-concealed merriment and some hooting. His reception afforded a remarkable constrast to that accorded to Ex-Gov. Harriman, of New-Hampshire, who a few hours later delivered an address of some hours' duration before one of the largest political gatherings ever seen in that city.

Mr. Greeley spoke from the balcony of a hotel. He referred to the fact that members of the Administration were, as he described it, running and racing from one end of the country to the other to persuade the people to keep them in office. [A voice—"That's like you, Horace." Laughter.] Mr. Greeley, not appearing to notice the interruption, continued: "I think that is something the whole people ought not to be reconciled to. Them of course, like master like man, the whole body of office-holders, some fifty thousand of them, generally able and influential men, are devoting their time and talents to re-electing their superiors to office, and thereby keeping themselves in place. I venture to say that since the 1st of May last Federal office-holders have done more work and devoted more attention to electing their bosses than to doing their duty. Now, this my antagonist friend, Gov. Hartman, who is here to make a speech for Grant and Wilson. He is Naval Officer of the port of Boston—a good fellow, I know, and a good man, but he is doubtless earnest, I say, he is trying to re-elect Mr. Maine and Pennsylvania. How can Gov. Hartman be earn the money we are paying him for that position of Naval Officer at Boston, while he is speaking all over the country. He is a good, capable man, but he ought to be at his post on his own salary as he is I do, and ought not to be paid for them out of the Treasury. Another point to which the people ought not to be reconciled. In all the elections ever held, from the time of Washington to the present, there has not been so much money spent by both parties as in this election by the Grant party alone. They have their treasury at their back, his vast army of office-holders, their Credit Mobilier, men with their large dividends, dividends five times as large as the capital invested. I tell you that right down in Henry-ed Vermont, where the people never heard of money being paid before, their money was paid out like water to induce Democrats to vote for the Grant ticket or stay away from the polls. In Maine $100,000 was paid for votes, and if they succeed there it is because they have stole to our ones."

After more "reconciliation" Mr. Greeley concluded. At Sunbury Mr. Greeley delivered an address before a "mass-meeting" numbering about 200, which were convened by Gens. Banks and Slocum. He asserted that if the political issues now before the country arising out of the late war were left to the settlement of the soldiers on each side, the country would have been pacified and reunited years ago. Those men respected each other for their gallantry, their soldiership and their courage, and a statement by them would exhaust some of the bitterness and prejudice which still exist. It was the aim of his life to unite these people, North and South, so that should danger ever again threaten their country, they would be found fighting side by side in the interest of the Union. Mr. Greeley spoke of the probabilities of the results of the elections in Pennsylvania and Indiana, claiming that unless those States were purchased they would declare for the coalition movement next October.

Mr. Greeley remains here to-night, and to-morrow will attend a mass-meeting at Scranton.

PRESIDENT GRANT.

Serenade to the President in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 26.—President Grant, accompanied by Gen. Porter, arrived in this city at noon today, and was waited upon by a large number of friends and politicians, among whom were Simon Cameron, Gen. Ochiltree, late of the rebel army; H. Bucheraweope and others. He gave a reception, and took by the hand all who were introduced. In the evening the merchants, who had held a mass-meeting at Concert Hall, serenaded the President, and in reply to the calls he responded as follows:

GENTLEMEN AND MERCHANTS OF PHILADELPHIA: You have heard much better speeching tonight than I could make if I were so inclined. I am very glad to see you, and am pleased to hear that you have been to hear such fine speeches, and how you have been engaged to-night.

Messrs. Cameron, Bucheraweope and others made addresses, and the serenade was brought to a close.

CONNECTICUT.

Democrats Going Over to Grant—New-Haven Primaries Attended by Many of Them.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 26.—The Republican primaries were held in this city last night, and in each of the seven wards there was a considerable attendance of Democrats. In the First Ward there were thirty Democrats, and they said by their spokesman that they had always been with the Democrats, but this Fall had determined to vote for Grant, and asked to be received as Democratic Grant men. In the other Wards a number of Democrats took part. It is predicted that there will be a very general defection of Democrats in this city, and there are few Greeley Republicans. As it has been the Democratic majority in New-Haven which has carried the State two or three times, the Republicans feel perfectly confident of a good majority for Grant in November.

Murder and Suicide in Jersey City.

Last evening Jersey City was considerably excited over the news that a terrible tragedy had been enacted on the Heights. It appears that a German named Michael Guering, and his wife Mary, who lived in New-York-avenue, near Franklin-street, were in the habit of constantly quarreling, and last evening it is supposed that in a fit of passion he stabbed his wife, and afterward cut his own throat. Guering and his wife kept lodgers, and at 9½ o'clock last evening one of the boarders heard the noise of the quarrel and called in an officer. The officer discovered the woman lying dead on the floor of one of the rooms, stabbed near the heart. In a back room the wretched murderer was discovered with his throat cut in a fearful manner, the bed being almost severed from the body. Guering was a laborer, about forty-eight years of age, and both he and his wife were of a very strong constitution. He leaves four children. An inquest on the bodies will be held this morning.

The Presidential Ticket.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Sept. 26.—State Attorney Chamberlain, of New-Jersey, states, in relation to the riot at Pattenburg, Hunterdon County, N. J., Sept. 22, he notice was sent to the prosecuting attorney or Sheriff until Monday afternoon. The Sheriff and prosecuting attorney went at once to the place. The former and a constable arrested all that could be found against whom there was proof of participation, some of the men having left the State before the Sheriff was informed of the riot. No resistance was offered, and there was no need of an extensive force of police or military. Upon being informed of the riot and murders by the authorities, Gov. Parker immediately issued a proclamation offering a reward of $500 for the apprehension and conviction of any of the murderers now at large.

THE INDIANA CAMPAIGN

Immense Republican Demonstration at Warsaw.

The Town Bursting with People—Remarkable Procession of Five Thousand Voters—Speeches by Gens. Logan, Hawley and Woodford and Col. Thompson.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WARSAW, Ind., Sept. 26.—Never has stronger proof of how deeply the great West is stirred by the dangers threatening the nation from the unholy alliance of Democracy and Greeleyism been presented than in this shire town of Northern Indiana today. From daylight until noon torrents of people poured into town from every quarter. They came by special trains from the surrounding counties of Allen, St. Joseph, Wabash, Elkhart, Whitley, Marshall, Fulton, Lagrange and Noble. They came by wagon, or on horseback, from every village, almost every farm, within twenty miles. They came en masse; men, women and children. Uncut corn was left to chance, mechanics dropped their tools, and the whole country-side hastened here as to the performance of religious duty. They came in the plain garb of every-day life, and in the neat uniforms of Tanners and Grant Clubs. They came bearing every specimen of the "Stars and Stripes," from garrison flags to miniature toy flags. They came with wagons gayly decorated, with horses caparisoned, with numberless bands of music; but, more than all else, they came possessed with enthusiasm for the Republican cause I have never seen equaled. Never have I heard anywhere in the land such lusty shouts for Grant and Wilson, nor seen so many thousand men so anxious to testify in every possible way the fervor of their political faith. Greeley, looking upon the 10,000 at Indianapolis, gathered by curiosity, and hearing hardly a vigorous cheer for him, declared next day in Ohio that he bore glad tidings from 20,000 Indianians. If this had been a demonstration in his honor, and he had witnessed it, he would have concluded that not a single Hoosier would vote against him. It is impossible to exaggerate the magnitude and spirit of this gathering, as it is impossible to overestimate its significance and effect.

An Avalanche of People.

By noon the little town was choked, and an avalanche of people had tumbled out upon the adjoining open country, and only a small portion of those who had come many miles to look upon and make part of the pageant could find room on the streets of the town to see the procession in its entirety. After some delay in forming this great mass, the signal gun was fired, and on beam moving through the streets and to the Fair Grounds, on an eminence beyond the village, where stands and been erected for speaking.

THE PROCESSION.

It is not necessary to describe this procession in detail, although it was one of the most notable ever seen in any campaign. Headed by a cavalcade of mounted men, in handsome uniforms, it had many prominent features, some pathetic, some grotesque, all suggestive. There was a printing-press, which threw off copies of a campaign song as it moved; a huge wagon carrying a harness-shop in full operation; a man on horseback representing Greeley on his Western tour; a wagon bearing the inscription: "We cannot turn our backs upon the past," on which was a soldier's grave with surrounding cedars, and over which bent a woman in widow's weeds; a wagon, the forward part of which was occupied by civilians seated at a table discussing politics, and which bore the label, "The New Way," and the back part of which had a label, "The Old Way," and was occupied by groups of soldiers, muskets in hand; a small buggy entirely empty was placarded "Liberal Party of Etna Township." In addition to all this, were thirty large wagons gayly decorated, each containing from twenty to fifty handsomely-dressed young ladies, and drawn by not less than six and some by as many as twenty horses. There were over two hundred country wagons crammed with men, women and children, while both horse and foot, there were over one thousand uniformed Grant Guards and Tanners, every man a voter, and in these ranks were all ages, from the youth who is about to cast his first ballot to the gray-haired grandsire, who has seen the wondrous political changes of the past fifty years. Counting all persons in procession, there were not less than 5,000, while four times that number gazed upon it from the streets and followed it to the grove.

IN THE GROVE.

Here preparations had been made to feed the multitude before the speaking commenced, immense booths being erected, where, at a trifling expense, a good meal could be obtained. After an hour had been spent about there, the speakers arrived, with a special escort, and the multitude gathered about the two stands. Never did orators have a grander audience, and never were orators more worthy of such honor, for here had come such true patriots as Gen. John A. Logan, of Illinois; Hon. Richard W. Thompson, of Indiana; Gen. Joseph R. Hawley, of Connecticut, and Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, of New-York, the two latter being reserved for the evening meeting in the Wigwam.

THE SPEAKING.

After excellent rendering of campaign songs by the glee clubs, one song being "Nothing Wears Like Leather," first published in the TIMES, Gen. Logan and Col. Thompson addressed immense crowds simultaneously from separa te stands. Both are in the front rank of popularity, and each was so inspired by the occasion that he surprised himself. Logan delivered a masterly argument showing how the Republican Party have been instruments in the hands of Providence for the advancement of mankind in all that is ennobling. He sketched the terrible struggle of the war, and the greater burdens of reconstruction laid upon the Republican Party at its close and proved that it had always been true to its promises, to liberty and progress, and had always unselfishly sought the greatest good to the greatest number. The latter part of his speech dealt with the inherent immorality and danger to the nation of the Greeley alliance with his accustomed force and plainness. After a speech of two hours he concluded, with an earnest appeal to his hearers to stand by their country in standing by Grant, and, taking his seat, was greeted with those times, three rousing cheers, which made the old woods ring as they leaped from 10,000 throats.

Col. Thompson had scarcely delivered one of those telling speeches for which he is famous. Years ago the "coonskin" among Indiana statesmen, long a representative in Congress, a man who is often before people for their suffrages and never was beaten, in his hale old age his natural power has not abated, nor has his power over the masses diminished. He, as Logan had done, carried his audience with him, and his eloquent and fearless appeal now seeking to obtain possession of the Government. In closing, he made this pathetic reference to himself: "Four years ago I said to you that you would probably never hear my voice again, and I had intended never again to appear in political strife. Then, as now, I had so far advanced in years that I had no desire for further political preferment, and did, and do, intensely long for rest. But, fellow-citizens, the country is in danger, and I cannot rest quiet in my home while the Democratic Party is trying to wrest the Government of my country under false pretenses."

BACK TO TOWN.

After the conclusion of these two speeches, amid music of bands and firing of cannon, the multitude poured back into the town, choking up the streets again, and as I write, thousands are in the streets below, cheering constantly and lustily for Grant and Wilson, for Tom Brown, and for Gen. Lucas. It is a good-humored crowd, for it patiently endures in its midst drunken Greeleyites, who hiccough for Greeley with mock pretentiousness. The day has closed, and exercises of the evening are about to commence, without a single accident or untoward incident having occurred to mar the demonstration, which Democrats in far eastern in Northern Indiana than its most sanguine friends had dared to hope.

NIGHT SCENES—THE WIGWAM.

Night came, but not darkness, for the streets were ablaze with thousands of torches burning in a procession greater than in this vast village, then the display was place greeted Greeley at Indianapolis after long and strenuous preparation. After parade of an hour the procession halted at the wigwam, already densely packed with more than 4,000 people. A banner was presented to delegation turning out the largest number of voters, and was given to the Fort Wayne Tanners, who came from the strong Democratic County of Allen.

Quiet being restored, Gen. Woodford, of New-York, proceeded to address the vast audience in the wigwam, and spoke for an hour and a half in his happiest style. He appealed with great force for the continued power of the Republican Party as necessary to the peace and prosperity of the nation. Long before he closed he had captured his hearers, and was often interrupted by vociferous cheering. He was followed by Gen. Hawley, of Connecticut, who never did more effective service for his country than to-night, when he delivered one of the most powerful arguments ever presented in behalf of the Republican Party. He took hold of the audience and lifted them up to the intensity of enthusiasm.

At 11 o'clock tonight the meeting adjourned, with great cheering for Grant and Wilson, Brown and the whole State ticket. Even then quiet came not to the the town, but the streets are still filled by cheering throngs, and the Republican jubilee bids fair to be protracted until daylight.

Stirred thus to the very foundation, Northern Indiana gives indubitable evidence that "Liberalism" has no hold among that people, and that the Republicans will have a majority in October larger even than has been anticipated. Much has been expected of this section, but this unprecedented demonstration shows that even more will be received. E. C.

CRICKET.

The Englishmen in Boston—A Close Contest to be Left Undecided.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—Cricket has experienced a temporary revival here within the past few days, owing to the promised visit of the famous "English Gentlemen Eleven," and the preparations of local cricketers to received them suitably. The responsibility of getume together the necessary twenty-two players was undertaken by the Winnissimmet Cricket Club, from which organization a number of players was selected, three of the Boston club nine being also included. The game was commenced on the base-ball ground today, shortly after noon, the attendance of spectators being very large, although the earlier part of the day had been showery and threatening, which, although wetting the grass, did not interfere with the fielding, which was very fine on both sides.

The twenty-two men first to bat had scored 42, the Englishmen followed and had barely tied their opponents when the last wicket fell, Mr. Grace making 26, the highest single score.

In the second inning the twenty-two made 45, and then the Englishmen went again to the wickets, and when the stumps were drawn they had scored 22, with the loss of six wickets, including that of Mr. Grace, who was caught out after making five runs.

This ends the game, as no further play can take place in Boston, the Englishmen leaving for Quebec to-morrow, en route for home.

THE BIENVILLE.

Examination of Witnesses by the New Board—The Testimony.

The Bienville investigation was resumed yesterday morning, before the new Board—Inspectors Beole, Hill and Mershon—at No. 39 Pine-street. The proceedings were open to the public, and the testimony was taken before some visitors, among whom was Inspector J. K. Matthews, the person who suspected the Bienville's boilers, and was thereby disqualified for service by the Commission of Society. The witnesses examined were the first assistant engineer, who was questioned by Mr. Matthews, and the subordinate who put out the fire in the Bienville's boilers.

William H. Bree—first assistant engineer of the Bienville on her last voyage, testified that he joined her ten or twelve days before her departure from the port; on the 16th of August he was on watch from twelve to four o'clock; his first knowledge of the fire was about eight from the engine-room to the deck; the chief engineer told him to turn on the steam in forward, between decks, as the ship was on fire; he did so; the chief engineer then gave orders for the pumps and start the donkey-pump; it was run thus from five to eight minutes, when she stopped, because the socket which connects the two piston-rods had broken; this was irremediable on learning this Capt. Maury said to the chief engineer, "What man have you to spare?" Stock as many as you can to the after-pump;" eight were dispatched, and as she was making steam faster than it could be blown into the hold, the watch was sent forward to shut the fire back; about half an hour later witness sent the men to bring the fires forward and shut the door; the men came up, he twenty-five pounds pressure; then sent the third assistant to go down and see if he could find any fire around the boilers; he reported back in a negative; she was adrift; he heard nothing of the bulkhead door; witness becoming satisfied of this, went up to Capt. Maury, who ordered him to take his men and get the large boat slowed on the port side alongside the wheel-house; found second mate getting boats on davits ready for launching; the forward boat had already been launched; Capt. Maury ordered witness to step into and take charge of the boat when she was ready; the Quartermaster and two sailors were in her; hauled up to the step-ladder and began to put women and children into her until they numbered twenty-two; witness was then told to take his boat to windward and lay there until the Captain left the ship, then to follow him; this was done when the Captain and engineer left; all the provisions in witness' boat were two heads of cabbage and three gallons of water; there was no compass; it was a metallic lifeboat about eighteen or twenty feet long; those on board of her were the ship's doctor, chief steerage steward, two firemen, two coal-passers, one sailor, quartermaster, witness, four ladies, six children from thirteen weeks to thirteen years old, and two men; the boat had a rudder and tiller; but no sails; the Captain's boat was lost sight of about sundown on Thursday, 15th; witness steered by the sun in the day and the moon at night; land was made on Friday afternoon at four o'clock; they arrived at Gonaives on Saturday at 4 P. M. on Tiburon Island; the provisions were all gone.

On cross-examination the witness stated that he thought both pumps worked and all were in good condition; he knew nothing of how or where the fire originated except when the quartermaster had told him of it; he had been about 300 feet from the forward of the boiler; he was ordered to leave and put two tarpaulins over the hatch; the donkey-pump had been used when the crew were exercised by a false alarm of a fire on board; he was not certain; witness likewise stated that the captain had promised to come down side of the boat forward night when the sea went down, to get them more provisions but he did not, and his boat was out of sight in the evening; and yet from the captain was a demijohn of rum which he flung to us early in the day. In speaking of the number of the others and those between them and the bulkhead door, witness said the part of the boilers was double; thought there was from four to six inches space filled in with sawdust; the bulkhead was made of two-inch plank covered with sheet-iron on perpendicular strips; a narrow strip laid between as a non-conductor of heat; he thought the bulkhead was two feet from the boiler; the door hinges were not bolted. The cross-examination was continued at some length without elicit any new facts; he did not know whether that the statement that the boat had been opened in the surf whereby the provisions were drenched; only thirteen remained the beach.

T. W. McCarty, builder of the steam engines and boilers of the Bienville, testified that he was not examined and did not know the boilers of the Bienville were built and put into her by him; he had seen them; they were from one boiler, about twenty-eight feet long, 12 in diameter; the boilers were built and put in by Mr. Lyon; he had seen the boilers loosed before they left the Bienville; looked over her before she was dry docked; he did not see the boilers; he was there since she was docked; he did not see the boilers; he was there since she was docked; he did not see the boilers; he was there since she was

SECOND CAMPAIGN EDITION OF THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Our second campaign edition is now ready. It is a paper of great value and interest, containing many articles especially written for it, and a very large collection of SHORT QUOTATIONS from the best letters and speeches which have been published during the canvass. These selections are pithy and full of point, and must prove of great service to clubs, speakers, and newspapers. They have been prepared with great care, and names and dates are carefully given in every case. The general contents render this the most effective campaign paper ever issued, and one which is indispensable to Republicans throughout the country.

Among the interesting features of this edition may be included the following:

1. An article bringing together the outrageous slanders upon Gen. GRANT which have been circulated under the authority of HORACE GREELEY, either in his own paper or his other organs—together with an incontestable refutation of these slanders.

2. Mr. GREELEY'S letters recommending bad men for office, showing the real drift of his sentiments as a "Civil Service Reformer."

3. A reply to the attacks upon Gen. HARTRANFT, Republican candidate for Governor in Pennsylvania.

4. GREELEY and TWEED—their partnership in a tobacco manufacturing company. The proofs and the facts, showing GREELEY'S close and secret alliance with TWEED during the reign of the "Boss."

6. REUBEN E. FENTON: A short sketch of a career which began in embezzlement, and was succeeded by corruption of the worst kind. Fenton's exploits as a dishonest clerk and a corrupt Governor will be partially described in this article—an article rendered necessary by the fact that FENTON would hold a very high office if GREELEY could insure his own election.

7. GREELEY'S Secession Record: A list of his utterances on that subject, with examples from 1860 to 1872.

8. The OAKES AMES Slander, invented by the Sun and New-York Tribune, fully disproved.

9. The Cincinnati platform and address, with notes by HORACE GREELEY. A very interesting and curious article, well worthy of preservation.

10. Gen. DIX'S famous order; Who wrote it? The truth on the subject.

11. A selection in short and pithy paragraphs, from the best speeches and letters which have been published during the canvass. These quotations would alone render the campaign edition of great value to the Republican cause all over the country. They include paragraphs, bright and pungent, from the speeches and writings of WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, GERRIT SMITH, FREDERICK DOUGLASS, RICHARD H. DANA, SENATOR CONKLING, Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, Dr. LEBER, SENATOR MORTON, Vice-President COLFAX, Judge HOAR, Judge STRONG, SENATOR FERRY, Attorney-General WILLIAMS and others. Whenever anything of importance has been spoken or published, we have extracted the best part of it and reserved it for this special edition.

The edition consists of four pages, price three cents a single copy, or $3 per hundred, and $25 per thousand. Orders should be sent in without delay, as we can only supply them according to the date in which they are received.

Mr. WHITE, chairman of health, will not enable him to complete his researches upon GREELEY'S connection with TWEED, and therefore we cannot publish it in this edition.

Mr. GREELEY, as he walks around toward home, is getting hysterical over the prospect. Yesterday he complained, in one of his harangues, that "in Maine one hundred thousand dollars was paid for votes, and if they (the Republicans) succeeded there, it is because they have one hundred dollars to put one." But he won't explain the astounding Republican triumph in Indiana, for only four Wednesdays ago, he assured a little crowd of his admirers of that State:

"I have faith in the good people of Indiana. I do not believe that out of the million and a half of them, there is one single man who can be induced to vote for money."

It will be worth while for Mr. GREELEY to remember this a week from Tuesday night. Will the Professor "make a note on it?"

An inquiry into the present management of the Erie Railroad will very properly arise out of the course pursued recently by Mr. S. L. M. BARLOW and his Tribune friends. It will be found that the shareholders in that concern are not one whit better off now than they were under the old management—that BARLOW & Co. have taken good care to protect their own interests. If the facts already before us are correct, as we believe them to be, the Tribune people will be rather sorry that they stirred up this mess.

"When the old Tammany frauds were discovered, a year ago, the Democrats of New-York, generally, owned up to them, and the consequence was the triumph of the Republicans in a Democratic State."

Will any reader of the New-York papers believe that the above is from the Express of Sept. 26, 1872? Let them refresh their memories concerning the course of the Express last year. It defended the Tammany thieves down to the very day of election. It abused us for exposing them. It suppressed all evidences of their guilt. The World, Herald and all the Tammany papers did the same. We said then that these papers would be the first to claim credit for the long struggle which we had carried on as soon as the victory was won. But fancy the Express pretending that it always knew TWEED & Co. were rogues! And yet the transformation is not greater than that which has turned the New-York Tribune into a Democratic organ more bigoted than the Express itself.

Mr. HALSTEAD, of Cincinnati, stated for months together, in his paper, that the President had been presented with a cottage by Mr. THOMAS MURPHY. When that slander was disproved, HALSTEAD changed his ground, and said Mr. MURPHY had subscribed $5,000. We challenged him to prove that in a way which he could not meet, and he then sneaked off altogether. Now he tries to throw the responsibility for the slander upon Mr. A. T. STEWART. Is not this a course worthy of an honorable man?

It is the misfortune and the necessity of the cause in which the Tribune is engaged, and the company it keeps, that it must sooner or later be exposed to every true Reform movement or organization. Yesterday it denounced the "Council of Political Reform," charging that body with being a Grant campaign organization in disguise; whereas the fact is that it is an organization which has existed for several years; that it is and always has been wholly free from partisan affiliations, and is composed of sincere and earnest men who really desire true reform. Being sincerely in favor of Reform it is not probable that it will favor the candidates whom the Tribune must support, but it will be news to every one to find that it is a Grant organization. But it is a necessity of the Tribune's position that such an organization should be denounced and slandered.

Vice-President COLFAX not only disposes very conclusively of the Credit Mobilier slander, but he places Messrs. HORACE WHITE, SAM. BOWLES and HORACE GREELEY in the unpleasant predicament of being obliged to confess either that they sided and abetted, six years ago, in accomplishing a monstrous fraud upon the nation, or that they have been recently engaged in rearing what they very well know to be an edifice of slander on falsehood. If there is a shadow of doubt upon any honest mind that the Oakes Ames business has been a pure invention from first to last, Mr. COLFAX'S clear and crushing reply to the labored misrepresentations which have been circulated on the subject cannot fail to dissipate it; and now observe the way in which the Chicago and New-York Tribunes and the Springfield Republican will wriggle out of the dilemma in which Mr. COLFAX has placed them.

Why Mr. Greeley Insults Union Soldiers.

Mr. GREELEY has not hesitated to make false statements concerning the Soldiers' and Sailors' Convention, held at Pittsburg on the anniversary of Antietam. In his speech of the 19th of September, in that city, he declared the Convention to be a "rehearsal of the pomp and pageantry, the circumstance and bluster of civil war." He said: "A large number of men were collected here, at a vast expense, with the single purpose of rekindling the bitterness and hatred, the animosities and antipathies, the fears and exultations of civil war." "I take you to witness," he went on, "that the orators on this occasion have been trying their best to make the people hate each other, for the sake of a partisan advantage."

Every statement in the above is the exact opposite of the truth. Every indication of the purpose of the Convention—its public call, the character of its officers, the addresses made, the resolutions adopted, the tone of individual conversation—showed, directly and conclusively, that no such feeling as Mr. GREELEY describes existed. Gen. BURNSIDE, the kindly and true-hearted gentleman and soldier who presided, said in his opening address:

"I am quite sure we do not make ourselves misunderstood today by expressing any ill-feeling toward our late enemies in the field. Because we have no such ill-feelings, and we know that the hatchet is buried. * * * But fellow-soldiers, comrades, let us select what was, in the hour of their benefit's peril, were true. Let us, of all things, refuse our support to men who believe there was truth in secession."

So thoroughly was this spirit understood, that the Convention was addressed by a large number of Ex-Confederates, from New-Orleans, in a letter expressing cordial sympathy with its purposes.

In complete harmony with the utterances of Gen. BURNSIDE were those of other speakers, while the formal, deliberate resolutions adopted by the Convention were still more emphatic. The fourth, which was greeted at every clause with loud and long applause, read thus:

"4. We cherish no spirit of revenge toward our fellow-citizens of the South. The magnanimity of our late Commander-in-Chief on the field of Appomattox was a sufficient pledge of the Union Army that the "bloody chasm" of the war was closed, and with malice toward none, but with charity to all, we extend the right hand of fellowship to all those who stand in good faith the results of the war, and who will extend to every American citizen, of whatever race or color, the rights which are solemnly guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States and the laws made in pursuance thereof.

It was in face of this overwhelming evidence that Mr. GREELEY made his false declarations. Why did he make them? Why did he single out for abuse the veterans who had gathered from the avocations of peace to pledge to each other their fidelity to what they believed to be the cause they fought for in the field? Why, of all the seven millions of voters in our country, should these be set upon by Mr. GREELEY with baseless insinuations and charges notoriously untrue? Has he so soon forgotten the pride and sympathy with which we watched our regiments marching to the front through streets crowded with their admiring countrymen? Has he still sooner ceased to feel the lingering thrills of that joy and thankfulness with which we welcomed them as they marched back again, with thinned ranks under their torn flags? Certainly the nation has not forgotten them, and the soldiers know and acknowledge that it has not. Why should a Presidential candidate, pleading for votes, heap upon the veterans insulting phrases without a color of truth to justify them?

The secret is an open one. Mr. GREELEY desired to "conciliate" the unrepentant portion of the secessionists of the South. He is their candidate, and he is not above serving them in any way he deems most acceptable. Every stage in his self-imposed pilgrimage has been marked by some effort to win the approval of this class. At Pittsburg, in the same speech in which he calumniated the Northern soldiers, he reiterated his practical acceptance of the doctrine of secession in 1861, and professed that, under similar circumstances, he would prefer to "take the chances" of a vote of the States on secession to an attempt to preserve the Union (as it was preserved) by force. At Harrisburg he declared that his purpose "above all things" in becoming a candidate was to secure the removal of the disabilities which keep JEFFERSON DAVIS and HOWSHER TOOMBS out of the United States Senate. At Warren, Penn., he avowed that his motive in bailing the arch traitor was to open a way to the Southern heart. At Corry, Penn., he presented the Kuklux outrages in a mild form, and pleaded that there were "excuses and provocations" for them. In the same address he denounced unqualifiedly the State Governments of the South, utterly ignoring the large share of native Southerners in their corruption, and classing all together in the rebel slang as "carpet-baggers." At Jeffersonville, Ind., he even acknowledged that his opposition to slavery "might have been a mistake."

We cannot err in believing that in thus electing to address these humiliating pleas to those of the Southerners who were original and are still unrepentant secessionists, Mr. GREELEY has despaired of support from the loyal portion of the North, and especially from the noble body of citizens who served in the Union Army. He must know that gratuitous insults to our veterans will be resented, not by them only, but by the great mass of the people of the North, and when he concluded to offer these insults, he must have abandoned all hope of loyal support. Having thus made his bed, he must be content to lie in it.

Fresh Air in Public Halls.

Since the present brilliant concert season began, there has been some warm weather, and this has drawn fresh attention to the very imperfect ventilation of most of our places of public resort. Steinway Hall is particularly unfortunate in this respect, and, by some means or another, the defect should be remedied without delay. The atmosphere there on last Wednesday night, during the Rubinstein concert, was simply murderous. Several people had to leave the hall because of it before the end of the performance, and others who sat it out have since been ill in consequence. We have taken occasion before to speak of the very bad ventilation of this hall, but nothing has been done to improve it; and we now take leave to say that the owners have no business to poison the public in this way, and that they ought forthwith to set about finding a remedy. If the situation of adjacent buildings is such as to prevent proper outlets, the edifice should not be used for public gatherings at all. But even such a plea, if it is advanced, is invalid. For ventilators on a sufficient scale can be pierced in the roof, and, if we mistake not, further openings can be had in the rear. We have not the least feeling of unkindness toward the proprietors, save that which springs from their improper treatment of the public; but on this point they are doing themselves and concert-goers a serious mischief, which ought immediately to be brought to an end. Their hall, as now constructed, is an intolerable nuisance, and there is no just excuse for its continuing to remain so. The experience of last season, when ladies were taken ill there over and over again, ought to have been enough to suggest the propriety of curing the evil. At some of the concerts of the Church Music Association, the room was literally like an oven, and worse, since the air in it was not only intolerably hot, but disgustingly foul. A great many complaints were made at the time, and it was supposed that at least after the '71-2 concert season was over, the matter would receive proper attention.

It appears, however, that nothing of the kind has been done, and that, not only through the Patti-Maro and Rubinstein concerts, but all through the Winter and Spring, people are to be stifled and made ill

CHARLES O'CONOR.

An Interesting Correspondence between Mr. THOS. E. CARROLL and the Great Democratic Chief.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, TROY, N. Y., Sept. 20, 1872.

CHARLES O'CONOR, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: Please permit an old admirer to express the delight he feels over the announcement of principles in your letter to the Louisville Democratic meeting, and the judgment given to also, (Occupation of that body—save as to the use of your name as the messenger.

When the Democracy come back to first principles, as enunciated, success will come back to them. When they adhere to consistency rather than resort to expediency, they will find it better to stick to statesmen of their own, than run after false politicians of other parties.

Your utterance of political doctrines must make an indelible impression on public thought, and with the object I have in view, I will be excused for requesting, for approval, the declaration that "Governmental intermeddling with those concerns of society, which, under judicious laws, might beneficially be left to individual action, is the only real evil actually developed in our system. This eminence is assigned to it because it is the fruitful parent of all others existing, and because the measures required to correct it are precisely those which would extirpate the unconstrained powers now so unscrupulously exercised by our officials. If, instead of prohibiting or diminishing this vicious practice, our people should impart to it new sanctions and greater vitality, reform must become impossible. Now, of this practice, above all other living Americans, Mr. Greeley is the recognized champion, and no body of organised opponents to it has ever existed in the country except the Democratic Party. Yet, by the decree of a convention assuming to represent that party, Mr. Greeley has been gazetted as its standard-bearer." It may fairly be added that Mr. Greeley has neither recanted his anti-democratic and illiberal heresies nor condoned his life-long villifications of the Democratic Party. You justly add that, "Aside from party sentiments, my (your) views of the public interest and of existing public necessities compel me (you) to repudiate the Baltimore nomination of Mr. Greeley. When speaking or writing on the subject I (you) have uniformly condemned it and declared my (your) readiness to support a Democratic candidate."

In comparison, you well add that "The success of Gen. Grant might involve no important consequences, but that of Mr. Greeley would consecrate the practices referred to, which in my (your) opinion are absolutely incompatible with the permanency of republican institutions."

On the strength of your avowals and position you might not to have been disappointed at your nomination by the objectors of Cincinnati and Baltimore, especially when you take into account the fact that the assimilators that nominated you outnumbered, to say the least, that which nominated Mr. Greeley. The Baltimore Convention was the least of a representative body that ever pretended to represent a great party in a delegated capacity. It threatens to bring conventions as well as the party into contempt.

As your response to the Committee of the Cincinnati Convention, advising your acceptance of its nomination, I notice you make the following observations: "I am quite prepared to say that there are a large number of combinations in the Republican Party who might well have aspired to the Presidency, and whose acceptance as candidates at Baltimore would not have been unjustifiable. The nomination which was in fact made, made it utterly so. Its folly is manifest, and its failure inevitable. A public position, though it has all the inherent qualities of a conspiracy, has not the same chance of success. The people may be sacrificed by a secret betrayal; they never consent to an open sale.

Ever since the snap judgment against popular sentiment obtained by the deed of Baltimore, arguments very inapplicable or very unsound have been used to prevent resistance. There is said to be no fit choice presented, and that at two admitted evils it is wisdom to choose the least. If all this were true it should not result in favor of the Baltimore nominee.

The outcry 'too late' is not just, even now. Man travel by steam and commune by electricity. If today a popular sentiment exists, it can be stimulated to action in an hour. Had we only the appliances of antiquity, a national impulse could light its fires upon a thousand hills and arouse the whole people. With our superior modes of communion, let it not be said that fifty days do not afford adequate space for an awakening."

The whole of your response might well be reiterated, and must be remembered in order to understand the full significance of both the latter paragraph alone quoted and that following:

"Whatever I might do in respect to any other office, I could neither accept a nomination or become a candidate for the successorship of Washington."

This declaration, unless its reconsideration may be induced, must be deemed conclusive in the premises. But, suppose the evident failure of the Greeley movement should continue to develop itself, might not the contingency occur of a declination by Greeley and the substitution of another name that would not only rally the Democratic masses, but enlist the disaffected Republicans? In such an event the "fifty days" you speak of, or even the thirty days that will follow the October elections, would be adequate for the formation of such a ticket as should have been made at Baltimore, to say nothing at Cincinnati. It is most now be apparent that Hendricks, Groesbeck, Buckalew, or either yourself, Seymour, Church, or Tilden, of our own State, would unite the Democracy with a fair prospect of success; that is, if the "Liberal" disaffection amounts to anything.

Since the results of the war, if the Democrats were so anxious for success, and had not the capacity to get it under Grant, they might have find it without going any further than they have gone, neither accepting the equivocal platitudes or adopting the nondescript candidates of Cincinnati. If they were so anxious to be liberal they might have found "liberal" associates in going originally for Gen. Grant, or in adhering to McClellan, or by taking up some other popular Union military sheffiain.

At the time of the original Cincinnati Convention a Presidential nomination was the price of the Tribune's support. Then "anything to beat Grant" meant only the thing that thought "Grant would be a better candidate for 1872 than he was in 1868;" and the only apparent reason for wanting that thing was, it would bring more of the customs or patronage of which there had been an alleged deprivation.

The fact is, the whole Greeley movement is not only the "tremendous blunder" it was called by the World and other wise heads, but it is destined to prove a disgrace to Democracy as well as a disappointment to Tammany. And it appears to me that you cannot to suffer any use of your name that may be deemed necessary to correct or retrieve that blunder.

Finally, my dear Sir, I make bold to say that as far as Gen. Grant is concerned, regardless of formal promises, I do not believe it will prove any easier to beat him than it was Gen. Jackson. Our friends made a mistake in not nominating their candidate. To do it would have required a much less concession than is being made in an opposite direction. He stands now where he should, if his battle for the Union, The Constitution as well as the wealth of the nation are worth anything. There he has some against him (you why were for him then, but he has also many for him now who were not for him then. It does not require a seer to foresee that between as far as it is practicable that western Horace Greeley get out of the way, Gen. Grant will be re-elected more easily than was either of his predecessors.

Your friend and obedient servant,

THOMAS E. CARROLL.

MR. O'CONOR'S REPLY.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 25, 1872.

MY DEAR SIR: I am only one among our great party millions; my assent or approval is not necessary to any public act of many, a few or

Of course, I am anxious in asking whether your proposed line of my name would receive anything personally disagreeable to make demands my decision. If it would, I would have no needless. You must yourself have seen that whether or not I concurred in your views, there was in them nothing that, judged by an ordinary common sense, I could regard as personally offensive.

It may not be amiss to say that I differed with you as to the position of Gen. Grant in popular esteem prior to the Baltimore Convention, and believed that a disgusted abandonment at Baltimore might have led to his defeat. In justice to the wire-pullers, I ought to say that I thought little and did between in reference to the Presidential nomination prior to the Baltimore affair.

Yours, &c.,

(Signed.) CHAS. O'CONOR.

Mr. CARROLL.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Peter Cartwright.

A dispatch from Chicago announces that Rev. Peter Cartwright, the pioneer Methodist preacher, died on Wednesday at his home near Pleasant Plains, Ill., at the advanced age of eighty-seven years.

Peter Cartwright was born on the 1st of September, 1785, in the County of Amherst, Virginia, from which State his father entered the Continental Army and served in the Revolutionary War for two years and six months. While yet a boy Peter emigrated to the far west of old Virginia, where he lived a pioneer in the wilderness. Experiencing religion at an early age, Mr. Cartwright joined the Methodist Church and became an itinerant preacher in 1804, being then only nineteen years of age. His education was naturally limited, but he soon became a noted exhorter and a great favorite with the denizens of that primitive region. In 1806 he traveled the Salt River and Shelby Circuits with Mr. McKendree as presiding elder. In 1808 he went the Scioto Circuit, and in the following year traveled through Muskingum. In this year he was ordained a deacon, and admitted to full connection. After traveling the Bauer Circuit, Mr. Cartwright was ordained elder, and appointed to the Salt River Circuit. In 1809 and 1810 he was at Livingston, Ky., and on the Christian Circuit in 1811. The Tennessee Conference was organized by the General Conference of 1812, and held its first session in the Fall of that year, and Peter Cartwright became a member thereof. In November of 1812 he was first appointed presiding elder, which office he has held as follows: 1812, Wabash District; 1813 to 1815, on the Green River District, Kentucky; 1821 to 1824, on Cumberland District, Kentucky Conference; 1826 to 1829, on Illinois District; 1829 to 1832, on Sangamon District; 1832 to 1836, Quincy District, and President Pleasant Plains Academy in 1834; 1836 to 1839, Sangamon District, and agent Springfield College in 1836; 1839, Springfield District; 1840 to 1844, Jacksonville District; 1844 to 1847, Bloomington District; 1848 to 1850, Springfield District; 1851 and 1852, Quincy Districts; 1853 to 1857, Pleasant Plains District; 1858 to 1861, Jacksonville District; 1862 to 1865, Springfield District; 1866 to 1869, Pleasant Plains District.

Mr. Cartright also served as pastor in addition to these, on the Christian Circuit in Kentucky, in 1813, 1815, 1816. On Red River Circuit, in 1817, 1818, and on the Sangamon Circuit, in 1833, and Superintendent of Potawatomie Mission, and again pastor on that circuit in 1835. Upon the organization of the Illinois Conference, in 1824, he was transferred to it, and was at its first session, held at Wm. Padfield's, St. Clair County, Oct. 22, 1824. And in all that time, forty-five years elapsing since that session, he has been absent from the Conference but once. He has been present at the first roll call forty-one times, and three times he came in after the roll was called. His character has been passed at every Conference. Was Treasurer of Metropolitan Church in 1839, and Sexton of Centenary Funds 1840-41-42. Vice-President of Conference Tract Society in 1839, and for many years President of the Conference Missionary Society. During these years he served at various times on all of the disciplinary committees. Two years on memorials, five on public worship, one on periodicals, eight on examination of undergraduates, six as steward, nineteen years on missions, beside his former connection with the Western missionary work. He thus spent eight years in the old Western Conference, eight years in the Tennessee Conference, four years in the Kentucky Conference, and forty-five years in the Illinois Conference, and had charge in the Western Conference of seven different pastorates, being returned to one of them the second year. In Tennessee Conference four years as presiding elder, and four as pastor, serving each charge two years. In Illinois Conference he served two years as pastor on the Sangamon Circuit, after which he was made presiding elder, which office he has held ever since—on the Illinois District, three years; Sangamon, six years; Quincy, six years; Springfield, nine years; Jacksonville, eight years; Bloomington, three years; Pleasant Plains, eight years. He had to travel to his conferences into Ohio, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois, and sometimes almost entirely across the adjacent States, and the entire distance on horseback. He was more intimately connected with the Potawatomie Mission than any other man, being among the first to originate and among the most energetic in carrying it forward and supplying it with funds and missionaries. Serving on the committee of his Conference in 1837-38 on a report on its general interests. In 1840, to examine papers connected therewith, and to pay the debts incurred in carrying it on, and to estimate the amount necessary for its sustenance, and when the Indians had moved to a more distant land, it was left to him to surrender all of its financial interests. During a number of these years he had the exclusive management of them. His large experience as a traveling preacher, and his keen foresight as an advocate of civilization and Christianity, brought to his mind the necessity of adapting our Missionary Society of Conference, and was often the first in general movements in the organization of new Conferences, and always served important parts on such committees. He was the author of a resolution adopted at the Conference of 1841, requesting the General Assembly of the State of Illinois to pass a law protecting worshipping assemblies from molestation. As one of the landmarks in the Western Methodist, Elder Cartwright will long be remembered, and his many virtues will survive to bless the Church on which he so long and faithfully labored for sixty-eight years.

OHIO.

Boasted Scrubwood Defection from the Republicans Dwindling Down—An Active Campaign—Mr. Cullen's Shoot in the Slaughterers' Camp.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 26.—The Republican canvass in Ohio has progressed thus far this week very satisfactorily. Reports from the greater portion of the Congressional districts are very encouraging, and nowhere except in those places where the German element is large, is any danger apprehended from any numbered disaffection. This German defection will be apparent in Hamilton, Cuyahoga, Lucas, Summit, Stark, and, possibly, one or two other counties. In Franklin and other Democratic Counties it will not be apparent, because the Germans of those counties are almost unanimously Democratic. From a careful sifting of all the facts thus far received at this central position, it is proven beyond doubt that the bluenings of the scrubwoods and their organs of the great uprising in their behalf from out of the Republican Party has no foundation save in the scruples indicated. Whatever chance may exist in the Democratic vote from that of last year will be mainly due to the condition of affairs in those counties. But the reports show that Eastern are supporting even there, and with the force of speakers now in the field, a very spirited delivery will be maintained up to the very day of election. A large number of the leading speakers are now on the stump, and the meetings are very encouraging in their character. The same resolute determination to rebuke apostacy as was exhibited in Maine is apparent here.

Postmaster General Creswell spoke last night at Toledo to a very large audience, and tonight at Sandusky, in the Sixth Congressional District, where a very warm canvass is going on between

Hon. Charles Foster, (Republican) and Judge Geddes, Congressman Frye, of Maine, will lend his powerful aid to Foster. Judge Frye, Mr. Creswell speaks at Cleveland on Friday and Mount Vernon on Saturday. Speaker Blaine makes three speeches next week—at Elyria, Springfield and Cincinnati. Senator Wilson will make five speeches—at Dayton, Cleveland, Toledo, Dayton, and Cincinnati. Attorney-General Williams will make five speeches in the southern part of the State—at Marietta, McConnellsville, Athens, Zanesville and Washington. Col. Forney spoke to-night at Bryan, and will speak at Fremont and Norwalk on Friday and Saturday. Secretary Delano had a splendid meeting at Bellefontaine, Logan County, last night, and another at Springfield, Clark County, this afternoon. Hon. Lewis Barker, of Maine, goes to the Southern part of the State, while Gen. Woodford will make five speeches in the Northern part of the State, beginning at Bryan on Tuesday. Gen. Hall, of Maine, who was just come over from a two weeks' canvass in Indiana, spoke at Kenton, Hardin County, to-night, and will devote himself to the North and West part of the State.

In addition to all these, Gen. Garfield, Ben Wade, Lieut.-Gov. Kirk, Gen. Hilyer of New-York, J. C. Winship, Esq., of Maine, Judge Bingham, Gov. Noyes, Gen. Leggett, Hon. Will Cullen, Gov. Sherwood and many others, to speak with all the candidates for Congress, will be actively on the stump for the remainder of the campaign. Senator Sherman, who has been absent all Summer, and who owes a deep debt of gratitude to the Republicans of Ohio, will nearly be home in time to make two speeches before the election. There is much apparently just complaint at his indifference to late claims was this far.

Vice-President Colfax's speech at South Bend last night has created a sensation among the retailers of slander here and in Cincinnati. They are equivocal in a very lively manner.

Hancock's career has so far produced no results, except to confound himself. The exposure of his mercenary disposition followed so quickly that he has been put upon the defensive, and his friends say that, having waited so long, they see no good reason why he should not have waited longer, except it be the pecuniary one by which he was influenced. The Cincinnati Courier (German) and Gazette are following him unmercifully.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Ratification Meeting at Harrisburg—The Whole Ticket Indorsed—Speeches by Secretary Boutwell and Others.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Sept. 26.—A perfect ovation was tendered to Secretary Boutwell in this city this evening, the large Court-room being crowded to overflowing to hear him. He addressed the citizens for over an hour, after the organization of the meeting. Hon. Francis Jordan, Secretary of the Commonwealth of the State, was chosen to preside. In the first part of his speech he set forth his reasons for being in Pennsylvania at this period, following with an eloquent eulogy of Gen. Grant, so clearly laid down as to create thunders of applause. Alluding to the enfranchisement of the negro, he asked whether Gen. Grant did not in his inaugural address of 1869, call upon the people of the country to ratify the Constitutional Amendments securing to them the right of suffrage, and he might say, without passing beyond bounds proper in such a discussion, that, in the Cabinet, Gen. Grant had expressed more anxiety for the success of that measure than for the accomplishment of any other one which the Administration had been identified. (Great applause.) He plainly set forth that there were three classes of persons who cannot consent by their vote to elect Mr. Greeley—the business men, the patriots, men and laboring men of this country. Among other things, Mr. Greeley had advised the Secretary of the Treasury, during the past three years and a half, to do twelve things inconsistently with each other, and either of which done in the way had proposed would be fatal to the business interests of the country. One was, the resumption of specie payments, and the other, the selling of the gold in the Treasury, to put it in circulation. The eminent speaker proved rather conclusively that there are two classes of one not fitted for business of statesmanship—critics and orators. The speaker concluded by reviewing the financial condition of the country, during the recital of which he was frequently interrupted with loud and prolonged applause. He was followed Gen. A. L. Hancock, Republican candidate for Congress in the Second District of Maryland, who referred particularly to the campaign for State officers, and exhorted all loyal people in Pennsylvania to work and vote for Gen. Hartranft, a gallant soldier who had nobly thrown himself into the breach at the outset of the war, and who fought until the perpetuity of the Union was secured, and an honorable peace vouchsafed to the nation. Gen. Hancock's address was of an admirable character, and elicited the enthusiastic plaudits of the audience in an almost continuous round from beginning to end.

Gov. Geary, in response to loud and repeated calls, at last came forward upon the stage, and, in a short but very pithy address, encouraged his hearers to stand firm, stating that he had traveled over the entire north-western section of the State within the past two weeks, and had never before seen such enthusiasm as was shown for Grant, Hartranft and Wilson. The Governor pleasantly alluded to a recent visit made to Maryland, and closed by assuring Gen. Hancock that after we carried the State in October we would go down to Maryland and help redeem it from Democratic morasses. Dr. Porter, a descendant of the famous Porter family of Pennsylvania, and who had recently left the Democratic Party, was called for, and in response, said he could make no speech, but he now thanked God every day of the day that he had seen reclaimed from Democratic bondage. Gov. Geary seized the Doctor's hands and welcomed him into the ranks of the Republican Party, while the vast audience shouted wildly with enthusiasm. Hon. Mr. Fleming was called for, and said although it was too late to make a speech, yet he felt compelled to say that he would willingly take Gov. Geary's place, and welcome any other Democrat who wished to follow Dr. Porter's example. Hon. David Mumma closed the meeting with one of his peculiarly forcible speeches, and the vast audience adjourned, with tremendous cheers for the whole Republican ticket. This has been, by all means, the largest and most enthusiastic meeting ever held in Harrisburg, while out of the Court-house. Mr. Boutwell speaks in Philadelphia to-morrow night.

The Business Men of the State United Against the Scrubwoods.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 26.—A gentleman who has just returned from an official tour through eight counties in North-western Pennsylvania fully corroborates the views expressed by Commissioner Douglas upon his return from the same section, to the effect that a large portion of the heaviest Democratic business and manufacturing establishments are using all their influence against Greeley, on the ground that his election would inevitably unsettle commercial affairs throughout the country. Another gentleman who has passed two weeks in the oil regions of Pennsylvania, in association with the largest operators, states, reports that Greeley has comparatively no strength in that quarter.

SEIZURE OF A RAILROAD.

Gov. Smith, of Georgia, Seizes Thirty Miles of the Alabama and Chattanooga Road.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 26.—The thirty miles of the Alabama and Chattanooga Railroad, in Dade County, Georgia, was seized, yesterday, by order of Gov. Smith, and the telegraph wires on along the same section of the road. Under a decree of Judge Bradley, of the United States Circuit Court, two receivers had been appointed for the road, and in behalf of the receivers so appointed, J. C. Stanton had taken possession of the road and was operating it. The seizure of the section named was made, as is alleged, for the better security of the State's indorsed bonds. Negotiations are now pending looking to its release, but with little prospect of success up to this time.

The Republican National Committee Still Quarrels.

A delegation from the State of Arkansas called upon Secretary Wm. E. Chandler, of the Republican National Committee, Fifth-avenue Hotel. The names of the gentlemen are Gen. S. W. Dorsey, Col. Henry Pack, State Treasurer, Col. C. E. Montgomery, Attorney-General, and Mr. A. E. Sickles. Col. Pace is renominated for his present position on the Republican State ticket. The mission of the delegation was to make some representations to prejudice in Arkansas against the Greeley ticket. They are sanguine that Arkansas will give a large Republican majority. And say that the statement of Horace Greeley, that 20,000 voters are disfranchised in Arkansas, is a lie.

"Unemployment Question."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your correspondent, "A Perplexed Housekeeper," desiring to know the name of the intelligence office to which I referred, I beg to enclose to you the circular in question. All I can say concerning the practice of the office is that I never met the place I discharged a domestic for dishonesty and untidiness. Not long after I received one of these circulars, with a request to fill up the blanks. This was not a pleasant duty, as I was then the girl was dishonest. I was also the girl was untidy. I, however, felt the courage to volunteer, if, say so, and I certainly could fill every situation. I therefore returned the circular, stating I would give verbal information to any party interested, but could not write it. In a day or two one domestic, whom I had discharged, was at another office, showing the one which had issued the printed questions, so severative that the former was not nice, had no real lady callers, and for this reason she had come to the latter, which she said, was always full of ladies. I have not seen it, she was dismissed from the latter she condemned, but inferred so from the facts stated.

I should say, however, that, referring to the circular in question, I had no purpose of drawing attention to any particular office, but merely referred to it by way of illustration in making a suggestion to my fellow-sufferers.

Very truly, CLIMAX.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Sept. 25, 1872.

[Our correspondent inclosed the circular, and we shall retain it in our hands. We have no doubt whatever as to the accuracy of all the statements made by our correspondent, but we cannot open our columns to a controversy concerning the management of individual "employment offices." A "Perplexed Housekeeper" may rest satisfied that the representations of "Climax" are strictly true.]

AMUSEMENTS.

Mr. Yates' Lecture.

To-night, at Association Hall, Mr. Edmund Yates, a novelist and general litterateur, as well known here as in his native England, is to deliver a lecture called "Modern Society." The lecture was pronounced, we believe, for no fewer than 100 nights in London, and it is embellished by life-size cartoons from such famous hands as those of Leech, Frith and Marcus Stone. We do not doubt that Mr. Yates will receive a hospitable welcome, or that either in his capacity of writer of fiction or satirical lecturer, he will regret his visit to America.

Musical.

The third of the Rubinstein concerts occurs at Steinway Hall this evening. The programme is a fresh one. That of the first matinée, to be interpreted to-morrow afternoon, is especially fine. The usual seats for the season of Italian opera was commenced yesterday morning at the Academy of Music, and will be continued until further notice.

NEW-YORK.

Enthusiastic Meeting in Albany—An Eloquent Address by Hon. E. H. Roberts.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 26.—The largest hall in this place was again filled to overflowing tonight to listen to an address by Hon. Ellis H. Roberts. The meeting was presided over by Hon. F. M. Finch, who delivered a brief and eloquent speech. Mr. Roberts then for two hours held the large audience by one of the most eloquent, logical and convincing arguments heard here during the campaign. His eloquent tribute to the success of Gen. Grant's Administration, his indignant protests against the slanders put forward by those who would disfranchise in the six Union States of the Republican party, was received with hearty applause. Alluding to Vice-President Colfax's recent speech, he said an eloquent tribute to that gentleman, and the others assembled in the Credit Mobilier signifier. His speech has done great good here.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The auction notice for yesterday, Thursday, Sept. 26, involving the disposition, under a Supreme Court order in partition, of the valuable lease and lot No. 18 West Fourteenth-street, south side, 25 feet west of Fifth-avenue, did not take place, as expected, R. R. Hazard, Jr., the auctioneer in charge, stating that, owing to the fact that the sale must be made for cash, instead of allowing sixty percent on bond and mortgage, as advertised, an adjournment until Tuesday, Oct. 8, had been concluded upon. The property will, on Tuesday, certainly be sold, and being in fee, instead of a leasehold, as is the case with most of the real estate in the vicinity, the transaction will attract attention. Nothing further, worthy of note, occurred yesterday. In reference to the proposed sale at Jersey City by J. M. Gibson, unless postponed owing to the storm, a report will be made to-morrow.

The rehearsed auction held at Bayonne City, N. J., (Bergen Point,) by Jere. Johnson, Jr., assisted by J. M. Gibson, on Wednesday, Sept. 25, was an unquantified success, the attendance being large and all the realty offered being sold at very satisfactory prices. The property lying on Chestnut, A, and E avenues, including tax water fronts on Newark Bay, comprised eight acres of land, or seventy-seven plots, in all about 112 city lots. These plots were sold for the first in the lotted, averaging $205 per plot, or $1 per sq. ft. The 30-foot avenues (fourteen city lots) brought $1,202. Full details, with names of purchasers, are appended. The auctioneers are to be congratulated upon the favorable results achieved. The sale at Maywood, N. J., (late West Hackensack,) in charge of Wyman, Sands & Gardiner, held also on Wednesday, we regret to say was not so satisfactorily concluded, none of the property offered being disposed of. About 300 persons were present on the ground, and some 100 lots were knocked down at an average of about $65 per lot. The auctioneer, however, found that the owner of the realty placed a higher estimate upon the lots than the would-be buyers, and protected the same as fast as offered. He accordingly adjourned the sale under directions until Oct. 3.

For today three legal auctions are announced at the Exchange, as follows: Sale by James M. Miller of house and lot on First-avenue, 87 feet north of One Hundred and Twentieth-street; sale by Joseph McGuire of house and lot on Thirty-fourth-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues; and unnamed sale by E. H. Ludlow & Co., of house and lot No. 75 Fourth-street, 75 feet west of Lewis.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT.

Mr. Colfax's Reply to the Credit Mobilier Slanders.

A Clear and Explicit Social and Re-Statement of the Great Calumnies of the Crédit-Mobilier —Will the Defamers Retract?

The following is the speech in full of Vice-President Colfax, at South Bend, on Wednesday evening, a portion of which appeared in the TIMES of yesterday:

Let me detain you a few moments, my townsmen, while I touch a fabric of falsehood with the lightning rod of truth, expose the spurious "Credit Mobilier scandal," that you sometimes see of what worthless stuff campaign slanders are manufactured. Not to put myself on the defensive. Far from it. In all my public life there has never been an hour when I would not have trusted a jury of my political opponents here to decide any charge affecting my honesty that the ingenious malignan could imagine or invent, or to render their verdict as to whether I could be bribed to cast any vote or support any measure against my convictions of duty and right. You see all my witnesses too, that during twenty years of editorial hits and speaking on the stump, I never sought to make you believe public men were scoundrels because I differed with them politically.

There are, my friends, three papers in the United States which, above all others, absolutely know, as I shall show, that bribing me to support Pacific Railroad interests is just as incredible as that I should need to be bribed to vote the Republican ticket. Seven years ago, with three gentlemen connected with and corresponding with the Chicago Tribune, the New-York Tribune and the Springfield Republican, I crossed the continent in a stage-coach, expressly that all four of us might see with our own eyes the proposed route of the Union Pacific Railroad, might decide as to its practicability, and might hasten its construction by using our influence, personal and journalistic, to induce capitalists to accept the liberal subsidies offered three years previously by Congress. From a letter written by Mr. Bowles to the Springfield Republican, dated at San Francisco, Aug. 20, 1865, and found on page 262 of his widely-circulated book, across the Continent, I quote the following:

"Government bonds are loaned to it to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars a mile through the plains, and forty-eight thousand in the mountains, besides which half of all the land each side of the road for twenty miles deep is donated outright to the Companies doing the work. * * * The Companies are further authorized to issue their own bonds to an equal amount to those granted by the Government, and secure them by a first mortgage, the Government loan taking the second place in security."

Mind you, my friends, Mr. Bowles is stating the offer of the Government, which was yet wanting acceptance by moneyed men.

On page No. 273 Mr. Bowles concludes this letter:

"Men of the East! men at Washington! * * * Lend now a few thousand of men and a hundred millions of money to create a new Republic; to marry to the nation of the Atlantic an equal, if not greater, nation of the Pacific."

I need not quote from my own numerous speeches, pamphlets and letters, nor from the editorial letters of Gov. Bross to the Chicago Tribune, and his lectures before Boards of Trade and capitalists to induce them to subscribe the "millions of money alluded to by Mr. Bowles, for the great work, nor from Mr. Richardson's letters to the New-York Tribune. Their favorable influence in pushing the enterprise is assured by Mr. Bowles' dedication of his book, dated Dec. 25, 1865, four months after his letter, as follows:

"To the railroad to indeed the great work of the day; the road which, when it shall be finished, will be one of the empire of corn west of the Mississippi. It is cheering to find that lines we went over the Plains, labor upon the eastern end of this road has had a new impetus; that it is clearly that new elements of capital and enterprise have become engaged."

Mr. Bowles wrote truly. The appeals of these representatives and correspondents of the New-York and Chicago Tribunes and the Springfield Republican, with, perhaps, my humble aid, based on the personal knowledge we had acquired by long and dangerous journey, was inducing men of wealth to accept the subsidies offered at first by the Congress of 1862, and reaffirmed and improved by the Congress of 1864, two years afterward, both of which acts were supported and vetoed for by such distinguished Senators as Charles Sumner and Lyman Trumbull. But these very capitalists have been denounced ever since by many papers and politicians as not better than swindlers, for accepting what had been proffered by Congress with the heartiest popular endorsement, and finally when others were offered millions where others would not hazard their dollars. Having myself made more speeches, addresses and lectures in favor of the Pacific Railroad as a political, military and commercial necessity, than any other man in the nation, nothing could be more absurd and self-refuting than the charge that I, one who was its open friend when millions doubled its practicability, had to be bribed to favor its interests. Enemies, not friends, are those whom bribes seek out and control. You might as well say that a Methodist had to be bribed, or induced to become a Methodist, or that an editor had to be bribed to support typographical interests. But, never having had in my life a dollar of stock of any kind that I did not pay for, I claim the right to purchase stock in the Credit Mobilier or the Credit Immobilier, if there be one, or in the Union Pacific, or Central Pacific, or Northern Pacific, or Southern Pacific, or Lake Shore, or South Bend and Plymouth Railroads; in oil wells or gold mines, promising immense dividends that sometimes fail; in printing offices or furniture factories; in banks or any other American business, just like any other American citizen of the rest of mankind. Nor do I know of any law prohibiting it. If there is a man out of all our forty millions of people who knows me, who believes I could be influenced a hair's breadth in private or public life by the purchase of any stocks in any company, I should not value his good opinion as worth any more than his evil one. I am proud to say, too, that in all my public life no man ever dared to make me a dishonorable proposition. Do I need to add that neither Oakes Ames nor any other person ever gave or offered to give me one share, or twenty shares, or two thousand shares, in the Credit Mobilier, or any other railroad stock; and that unfortunately I have never seen nor received the value of a farthing out of the two hundred and seventy per cent. dividends, nor the eight hundred per cent. dividends in cash, stock and bonds, you have read about every day for the past month, nor one hundred per cent., nor one per cent., nor the tenth of one per cent. I have said that if twenty shares of it could be purchased at par, without buying into a prospective lawsuit, it would be a good investment, if it was as valuable a stock as represented. And I have said that I would like to buy twenty shares at par, if attainable, in the Studebaker Wagon Company, or the Birdsell Clover Separator Company here; and I challenge either one of the two last companies to give me such an opportunity now or hereafter. But, never having been plaintiff or defendant in a Court of justice, I want no stock of any kind, at any price, with a lawsuit on top of it; not even with the prospective dividends of twenty-two thousand dollars, which, "I am free to maintain," neither these good eyes of mine nor this pocket-book have ever seen the first dollar of, although it is so positively asserted that I have been entitled to this handsome amount ever since four years ago.

Here I might stop. But some of these papers have been so anxious, day after day, to hear from these gentlemen, whom they would have been so quick to defend instead of to reverse a few years ago, that I must continue this exposure. I have determined that nothing that can be said, or charged, or insinuated against me in this canvass shall induce me to say a harsh word in reply, and you will notice, therefore, that I abstain from using language which the very mildest of you would employ if your neighbor had sought to blacken your character, day after day, in infamous.

The favorite correspondent of the present Chicago Tribune, Gath, was instructed, as he states in his recent letters, to investigate and write up for that paper the Credit Mobilier. I shall refer now to only one single paragraph out of its many columns so consciously printed in that paper with sensational head lines and largely copied from in the New-York Tribune. He charges that Speaker Colfax and Speaker Blaine kept Oakes Ames at the head of the Pacific Railroad Committee; an untruth; Ames having only been a member of it, and never its Chairman in the same sentence he says:

"Ames carried through Congress a scandalous proposition by which the Government abandoned its first mortgage of this highway, and allowed the private mortgage bonds of the railroad to take precedence."

And this is reported editorially in the Chicago Tribune of last Wednesday. I have already shown you from Mr. Bowles' letter of August, 1868, that this was already the law before capitalists were induced by the influence of the representatives of the New-York and Chicago Tribunes, and myself, to accept this very proposition of Congress, and myself, to accept this very proposition of Congress, for did Mr. Ames invest a dollar in the Pacific Railroad till after the letters of Gov. Bross to the Chicago Tribune, of Mr. Bowles to the Springfield Republican, and of Mr. Richardson to the New-York Tribune, had been published, every sheet a year, too, after this very statement by Congress in 1864.

Gath says in this same paragraph of his letter that

"Ames was able, with the help of the most eminent men in the Republican party, to induce the United States to give the great sum for carrying the mails over this road, while at the same time he never paid the interest on the Government bonds as it accrued."

The facts, as exactly as was with this charge, are that the railroad has never received, nor ever claimed, but half of "the great sum for carrying the mails," the other half having been always retained and applied on the interest of the bonds—that Attorney Postmaster-General Creswell certified this to retain the whole, but the Senate Judiciary Committee, having been instructed to examine the question, decided that the Congressional charter authorized only half to be thus retained, and Creswell so re-rendered. After twelve years of debate in the Senate, the decision so decided by 36 to 13, Senators Trumbull and Thurman both speaking and voting in the favor. This correspondent concluded this paragraph thus:

"In short, the Union Pacific Railroad first begged a loan from the United States of from $16,000 to $32,000 a mile, and then robbed it of the interest on the loan. Saved the loan itself back to a contingent place, and pocketed it over with another and a private loan of its own, and then swindled it out of the whole great sum for the mail service."

These charges are very grave, and, if true, would blast forever the character of men capable of such conduct, and give color and confirmation to the original charge of bribery and corruption. The only answer necessary to them is, that not only does the Congressional Globe prove, as I have shown, their entire falsity beyond all contradiction, but the editors and correspondents of the Chicago Tribune know, of their own knowledge, that there is not a particle of truth in any one of these sweeping indictments. When such have assumed these to be true, even with all the enchantment of a political vacuum, it is a mystery to me.

Let me ask you, now, if the public have not the right to demand from the editors and proprietors of these two great newspapers, the New-York and Chicago Tribunes, some personal explanations? They after day their pages have been filled with lucubrations and charges some of which they happened to know, better than all other men, could not possibly be true, and nearly all the rest of which they knew their own files explained and disproved. Day after day they have sought to make the people of the United States suspect a number of their prominent public men, and the builders of the Union Pacific Railroad generally, as a band of thieves, secundrels and swindlers, and they have demanded that those thus assailed should be heard from." Well! they have heard a calm, dispassionate statement from one of those whom one of the Tribunes stigmatized as "the Twelve Apostles who sold out to the Credit Mobilier at $20,000 apiece." I submit, in sorrow for those who then "bear false witness against their neighbor," that clearing their own skirts from the "scandal" of their course is the next thing now in order.

THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

The Second Day's Proceedings—Address of Bishop Potter—A New Cathedral to be Erected.

The Episcopal Diocesan Convention reassembled at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in St. John's Chapel. The religious services at the beginning of the session were conducted by Prof. Olsen, of St. Stephen's College, Annandale, Penn., and Rev. J. F. Potter, rector of the Episcopal Church at Greenwood Works, Orange County, N. Y. Bishop Potter delivered his annual address. He announced that he had fulfilled most of the duties devolving upon a Bishop of the Episcopal Church. He referred to the death of a faithful servant, Rev. John David Wolfe, and paid a glowing tribute to his memory and virtues. The record of the Church for the past year, he said, showed a steady growth in numbers, means and methods, and a larger proportion of persons had been confirmed than for many previous years. He pointed out the need of a more thorough education of the children in regard to the tenets of the Episcopal Church, and urged the members of the Convention to devote their best energies in this direction. He said that a blessing would descend upon the labors of the Church if fifty or one hundred acres of land could be purchased at a distance from the street-cars, upon which schools, chapels, workshops, and all the needful means of recreation could be erected for the healthful instruction of the children gathered from the rut of the slums and alleys. Alluding to the fund for the support of aged and infirm preachers, the Bishop said there was every reason to believe that the amount would soon be sufficient to provide adequate provision for the comfort and welfare of those members of the clergy who were physically incapacitated from remaining in the service of the Church. Among other contributions, he announced that a lady connected with St. Paul's Chapel, in this City, had lately given $500 toward the permanent fund. In accordance with the recommendation of the Archbishop of Canterbury and other eminent English clergymen, the Bishop hoped that the Convention would adopt a resolution setting apart the 30th of December next as a day of fasting and prayer on behalf of the work of missions throughout the world. In conclusion, Bishop Potter alluded to a subject which he said had engaged the thought of leading minds in the Church for many years—the necessity for erecting a cathedral in this City. He had no doubt that the erection of such a building would bring forth good fruits, and well repay the Church for the necessary outlay. He thought that the want of a cathedral was sadly felt, and was confident that such an edifice would soon be built.

At the conclusion of the Bishop's address, a resolution was passed appointing a committee of seven to take into consideration the recommendation in regard to the day of prayer for missions.

The following resolutions were then offered by Mr. Nast and adopted:

Resolved, That a committee of fifteen be appointed to take measures for the establishment in the City of New-York of a cathedral of the diocese; that such Committee frame and apply for a charter of incorporation, and to receive subscriptions toward the purchase of a site and the erection of the cathedral, church and other buildings in connection with the same.

Resolved, That the Bishop of the diocese be, ex officio, a member of said Committee, and its Chairman.

Mr. S. B. Ruggles also presented the following resolutions, which were referred to the Committee of fifteen mentioned above:

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to consist of the Bishop and of the laity, to unite with the Bishop in selecting a proper site for a cathedral in this diocese, and in procuring the means for paying for the same, and also any legal act of incorporation needed for holding the same property.

Resolved, That, in the judgment of the Convention, all subscriptions for the object in question should be made upon the express condition that neither the site nor any building to be erected thereon shall at any time be encumbered by mortgages or any permanent debt.

Queens County Fair—The Exhibition and the Premiums.

The Queens County Agricultural Fair, yesterday, notwithstanding the rain, was attended by not less than 5,000 people, and much satisfaction was expressed at the exhibition, which it has been decided to continue until Saturday. Superior specimens of short-horn, Alderney and native cattle, fine, middle and long wool sheep, and large and small breeds of swine are shown. All the leading breeds of poultry are also represented. The fruit and vegetable classes are very full, as are also the lists of miscellaneous articles usually shown on such occasions. Premiums amounting to nearly $5,000 have been awarded in all.

The exhibition of horses was deferred until today, when, in addition to the regular premiums, a special one of $100 will be given for the best matched pair of road horses. The same amount is also offered for the best stallion with four of his colts, to be driven four in hand. Special premiums, ranging from $10 to $100, are offered for saddle and road horses, and one of $50 for best three teams from one town. Special premiums of various amounts are also offered for other stock.

The Dock Commissioners—The Scott Monument.

The Commissioners of the Department of Docks met yesterday, John T. Agnew presiding. Mr. John Roche obtained permission to extend the bulkhead between Ninth and Tenth streets, East River, 100 feet. Permission was granted to the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company to erect a cable box on the slip at the foot of Jackson-street, East River. The report of the Audit Committee on bills to be paid, amounting to $27,783 83, was read and adopted.

The application for the use of the derrick of the Department by the Scott Monument Committee, for the purpose of removing the monument from Pier No. 20 North River to the Central Park was granted, and instructions issued to Capt. Johnson, of the Department, to superintend its removal. The meeting then adjourned.

A Railroad Quarrel.

The disagreement between the New-Jersey Central and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Companies, which has been rumored since their consolidation, has assumed a definite form since the declaration of a quarterly dividend by the Central Company. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company have declined to ratify the payment of a dividend, for the reason that in the opinion of its Directors the companies have not earned enough to justify one. It is also said that the Central Company violated its own express agreement by declaring a dividend after the Joint Committee, to whom the matter had been referred, "with power," voted against the same. After the declaration of the dividend, Mr. Moses Taylor, who was a director in each Company, resigned his seat in the Central Board, and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company commenced proceedings in the New-Jersey Court of Chancery to restrain the payment of the dividend.

Suicide in a Public Reading-Room.

Henry Bremer, a jeweler, committed suicide by shooting himself through the brain in the reading-room of the Young Men's Christian Association at Newark yesterday forenoon. Bremer entered alone and sat meditating, while three or four other occupants of the room were engaged in reading. Suddenly he placed to his head a large pistol and fired. Portions of the skull and brain were carried to distant parts of the room. After the shot the pistol fell from the lifeless hand, and the dead body sat still upright in the chair. Bremer was nearly fifty years of age, and had been a regular visitor at the rooms of the Association for three years past.

FORRESTER'S FATE.

The Famous Prisoner Returns to Joliet Prison.

Secrets of the Nathan Case—Where Did the Dog Come From?—Tim Lane's Immunity from Justice—Was Forrester Nathan's Murderer?

William Forrester, the noted criminal who was charged with the murder of Mr. Nathan, wearying of confinement in the Tombs, consented to waive his privilege of habeas corpus, and was taken to Joliet State Prison, Illinois, yesterday. His case, one of extraordinary interest from the beginning, mostly proves the utter incapacity of the Detective Police. They vaunted "dead sure" proof was born to shrouds by Mr. Howe, Forrester's counsel, and a beggarly array of disjointed assertions placed in the stead of a continuous and complete chain of circumstantial evidence pointing to the prisoner's guilt. It is idle to say that Forrester's escape has been an honest one, equally idle to assert that he knows nothing of the Nathan murder. In the one instance he has been and is now a thief; in the other he, with a few others of the same stamp, know more concerning the terrible crime than all the Police and the machinery of the law, and at this point the action of the authorities naturally began. Forrester's name was given the authorities by an associate of thieves and the former keeper of a thieves' resort in this City, who, by doing so, secured the release of his brother, a panel thief, from State Prison. This man mentioned the name of George Ellis, a former companion of Forrester, then serving a term in Sing Sing for burglary. He also desiring release, informed Superintendent Jourdan that Forrester, himself and Tim Lane, alias "Red Tim," went to Nunda, on the Erie Road to "crack" the White Bank there. It being necessary to break a window glass, Forrester, not liking to spoil the butt of a fancy pistol he had, went into a ship-yard near the bank and brought from there, as Ellis alleged, the "dog" with which Nathan was murdered. The burglars were disturbed and fled, hiding their tools under a railroad bridge. But Forrester brought with him to this city "the dog." Tim Lane has not been arrested; he walks the streets of this city today, simply because he is a pet of the detective force and a "stool-pigeon" or informer for a couple of officers. Deceive Farley, who went to Nunda and found the bank robbers there, never brought "the dog" to the ship-yard in Nunda to have it identified. Forrester's examination proved a farce. A conscientious witness named Keenan deposed to seeing Forrester enter the basement of Nathan's house at 7:34 o'clock on the evening of the murder, and then in reality the man seen was the night watchman, who was trying the basement door. The prosecution having no other witness to offer, abandoned the case, and Mrs. Nathan paid Detectives Clarke and McElfresh at Washington to "fix" the City Judge, before whom nothing was proved. Forrester was to have been brought before Judge Leonard in the Supreme Court today. For two hours on Wednesday Capt. Irving and Superintendent Devlin, of Pinkerton's Agency, were with Forrester, the former, according to contract, to convince him that he would be better treated if he were to waive his writ of habeas corpus and go back to Joliet Prison without delay. He "weakened," to use his own words, yesterday morning, and did so. He was taken from the cell, the first of Howe & Hummel, who represented him since his arrest, and signed the following document:

NEW-YORK CITY PRISON, Sept. 26, 1872.

I hereby authorize and request my counsel, Mr. Howe, to withdraw the writ of habeas corpus issued by the Supreme Court of the State of New-York, and allowed by Hon. W. H. Leonard, one of the Justices thereof, on the 23d of September, and directed to the Warden of the City Prison, commanding him to produce my body at said Supreme Court, Chambers, on the 27th day of September, 1872.

WILLIAM FORRESTER.

Mr. Hummel proceeded to the Supreme Court and withdrew the writ. Immediately after, Warden A. W. Edwards, of the Joliet Prison; Mr. Henry W. Davies, Superintendent of Pinkerton's Detective Agency, and Capt. James Irving, of the Detective Squad, were escorted into the main corridor of the prison by Warden Edwards, and shortly after Mr. Reporter was conversing with Forrester. In answer to a question referring to the inducement he had received to compensate him for the withdrawal of the writ, Forrester said: "Gladly as I would tell you anything, I cannot speak on that subject, sir, in private. I consider that it is best for me to return to Joliet Prison without any useless quibbling, for I feel I would have to go anyhow. My counsel, Mr. Howe, did all he could for me, and cleared me of the murder charge, but I do not think that his sagacity or law power could save me from that requisition. Of course I feel somewhat regretful at my capture. Why shouldn't I, with thirteen years hard labor in prison before me. I would say one thing, however, about John Connors, in New-Orleans. I see by the papers that Connors is said to keep a thieves' resort. He does nothing of the kind. He keeps a respectable boarding-house. I am only allowed to write a letter once in two months, but you will hear from me. I cannot say anything about the offer published in your paper; and, furthermore, I know the looks of things now, I think I never will. Yes, I'll take good care of myself. Good bye."

The offer was to the effect that if he received a pardon from the Governor of Illinois he would adduce such facts as would satisfy the public as to the real murderer of Mr. Nathan. Some designing and interested persons who hear favoritism in their mouths have questioned the truth of the statement. Forrester made the offer to Detective McDevitt, of Washington, when he was arrested, and Detective McDevitt came to this City one morning and had an interview with Forrester regarding the matter. On the arrival of Warden Edwards Forrester came out of his cell, dressed in a suit of light gray clothes. He bowed to Warden Edwards and stood there awaiting orders. Mr. Davies handcuffed him, and, after shaking hands with Keeper Kennedy, he walked through the yard of the prison and the hall into a carriage which was in readiness at the Franklin-street entrance to the Tombs. The carriage was rapidly driven away, as Mr. Davies said, to Jersey City. Instead of going to New-Jersey, Capt. Irving ordered the carriage to be driven as rapidly as possible to the Twenty-second Precinct Station-house, in West Forty-seventh-street, and placed the prisoner in the charge of Capt. Killalea, with the strictest injunctions to keep him safely, and to take the proper precautions to prevent any attempt of the prisoner to escape. Forrester was placed in a strong cell, and a policeman was placed on guard at the door. No person but the officer in charge was allowed access to the prison, and every precaution was taken to prevent the prisoner making an attempt at escape. Forrester remained quietly in the cell in which he was confined until 7 o'clock, when Capt. Irving and Detectives Bennett and Clapp arrived at the Station-house in a carriage. Forrester was taken from the cell, the handcuffs placed on his wrists, he was placed in the coach. Capt. Irving took his seat beside the prisoner, and the detectives seated themselves opposite to him. The carriage was driven to the Grand Central Depot, and the prisoner was taken into the depot through a private entrance without attracting any attention. Forrester was placed on board a sleeping-car attached to the Pacific express-train. On this car Mr. Edwards, the Warden of the Joliet prison and two of Pinkerton's detectives were in waiting to receive him. Capt. Irving formally delivered Forrester over to Warden Edwards. Forrester was then placed on a seat in the compartment which had been specially engaged for the through trip to Chicago, and was handcuffed to one of Pinkerton's men who assumed his place. Leg irons were then placed on his ankles. The prisoner bid farewell to Capt. Irving, and thanked him for the kind treatment he had received from the New-York Police during his sojourn of nearly three weeks in this City. He quietly had all this been accomplished that no person about the depot except the officers and the conductor of the train knew that the man who had become so notorious through his misdeeds was on the train. At precisely 8 o'clock the train moved out of the depot, and Forrester commenced his long way to the prison where he is to serve out thirteen years of imprisonment after having enjoyed nearly four years of liberty. Sergt. Armstrong, of the Depot Squad, had been notified, and stood ready to lend the aid of his force if their services had been required.

The National Election Law—Duties of Supervisors and Deputy Marshals.

The following is a digest of the provisions of the new national election law, in relation to the appointment of Supervisors and deputy marshals, and their duties, especially as it applies to this City:

Upon application of two citizens the United States Circuit Court Judge appoints two supervisors of election for each election district, who shall be of different political parties and able to write and read the English language. The supervisors must attend at the place of registry and at the place of voting during the election.

The United States Marshal is empowered, upon the written request of two citizens, to appoint special deputy marshals in each election district, in such numbers as he may see fit in his discretion. The duties of the deputies are to preserve the peace and keep the ballot-boxes in the discharge of their duties, preserve order at the places of registration and at the polls, arrest fraudulent registrations and persons guilty of fraudulent conduct of the part of their office at the election.

The neglect or refusal on the part of any supervisor or deputy marshal to fully perform his duties is made a misdemeanor. The supervisor and deputy marshals are to receive as pay each for each and every day they shall have actually been on duty, not exceeding ten days.

Hon. Jehiel Davenport, who has been appointed Chief Supervisor, has received a large number of applications from the various political factions in the City to have names of persons presented by him to Judge Woodruff for appointment to the positions of supervisors in the various election districts, and Mr. Davenport states that he expects to have difficulty from most of these political factions, each faction presenting one or more candidates from each election district in the City, before noon Monday, when all the names are to be called off in open Court before Judge Woodruff, and any persons may make objections to any name appearing on the lists.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE HOSPITALS.

The Tenth National Bank Crowding City Money—A Reason in Black Tuesday—A Sample Explanation of a Clumsy Canard.

The Tenth National Bank was during the year 1871, a depository of several departments of the City Government—of the Department of Charities and Correction and the New Court-house Commissioners, notably sending others. During the muddle into which the "Ring" had brought our finances, this bank (with what authority may be questioned) allowed these departments to overdraw their accounts to the extent of $277,800 for Charities and Correction, and $245,000 for the New Court-house Commissioners. (Norton, Coman and Ingersoll.) When Controller Green was called upon to take charge of the Department of Finance, his movements were not a little embarrassed by these large overdrafts in excess of appropriations, and he very prudently insisted upon a thorough examination into the accounts before liquidating the claim.

The bank some three months ago applied for a mandamus to compel the Controller to pay over the money, which Judge Barrett denied. The Department of Charities and Correction is in some points so intimately connected with that action has been delayed until this decision can be obtained.

The Department of Charities and Correction meantime was furnished means to carry on its operations by depositing funds with the Tenth National Bank. In violation of a distinct understanding, the Bank has adopted the arbitrary method of seizing these deposits of this Department to settle its claim, thus attempting to throw the onus of the consequences upon Controller Green. This seizure of moneys occurred more than two months ago, and the Controller has ever since kept the Department of Charities and Correction supplied with money; the Commissioners of Charities and Correction immediately after this seizure discontinued their deposits with the Tenth National Bank.

There is opportunity for economy in the administration of the Department of Charities and Correction, and when, in the general curtailment of expenses, the appropriation to that Department was reduced by the Board of Apportionment, it was by no means intended that such curtailment should fall upon the sick, disabled, poor and helpless, but rather upon the idlers and those of large pay and small service. The Controller has not the least idea of allowing any hospital or dispensary to be closed or charity abandoned, in consequence of this similar course of the Tenth National Bank, so persistently and unjustly seizing the funds of the Commissioners of the Department of the City directing their bank accounts now is apparent. They should have kept within the appropriations last year, and not have violated one of the first rules of commercial life: "Never overdraw the bank account."

The Sappho-Dauntless Match on the Harlem River.

The match race between the Sappho and Dauntless Clubs was decided yesterday afternoon over a three-mile straight-away course on the Harlem River. The Sapphos had the steamer Catlin, and the Dauntless the Tiger Lilly, to carry their members and friends over the course. The above two Clubs are the youngest in the "New Settlement," and deserve a great deal of praise for the spirit and energy shown thus far. The boats and crews were as follows:

Sappho.—E. B. Pinkney, bow, 112 pounds; Warren Arthur, 114 pounds; E. M. Knapp, 128 pounds; W. S. Devoe, stroke, 136 pounds. Shell, 17 by 30, built by Tom Fearon.

Dauntless.—F. W. Peckwell, bow, 125 pounds; John McCarthy, 143 pounds; Charles E. Knapp, 149 pounds; Joseph Livingstone, stroke, 125 pounds.

They started at 5:31, on the last of the flood, from the Powder-boat, a little above Fourth-avenue Bridge, to finish at Morris' Dock, above High Bridge, three miles. The Dauntless went to the front within a furlong of the starting point, both crews steering wildly but pulling well. At the Central Bridge the Dauntless led by two lengths, but the Sapphos rowed a game stern race, and when their opponents made another bad point in steering, they crept upon them, and passing through High Bridge, lapped them. When within a half mile of the finish the Sapphos were bow and stern. Some one on shore here fired a gun, which the stroke-oar of the Dauntless mistook for the signal to finish, and therefore ceased rowing. The Sappho rowed to the end of the course, winning the race handsomely by 30 lengths. The latter rowed sliding seats and their opponents stationary. The judges were: For the Sappho, Eben Losee; for Dauntless, F. J. Engelhardt; referee, John C. Babcock. The Gramercys were out with a barge and gig, and a four-oared shell crew of the Athletic Club were also on the course.

The race of John Kyle's yacht will come off on Wednesday next.

To-morrow, Ed. Smith, of the Argonauts, and Oliver Johnson, of the Neptunes, will row their three-mile straight-away race on the Kills.

The Fall regatta of the Schuylkill Navy also comes off to-morrow.

Parade of the American Mechanics in Newark.

The United Order of American Mechanics yesterday made, at Newark, the grand-est demonstration of the kind that has ever taken place in this country. Great preparations had been made for an imposing parade, and, despite the heavy rain, not less, it is estimated, than 1,000 men, in regalia, were in line. They represented councils from every city of importance in the State, and large representations were present from New-York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia. The line formed on Centre-street at 1 o'clock, and, preceded by the National Council of America, the members of which were in carriages, marched through the principal streets of the City. No less than fifty-two councils were in line, some of them—such as the Brooklyn delegation—presenting no less than 250 men. As they marched, all in the regalia of their order, they presented an extremely imposing spectacle. The visiting counties were escorted to the trains, and left Newark for their homes at 4 o'clock.

A Pair of Youthful Thieves.

Joseph Sproules, aged fifteen, and James Dillon, aged eleven years, arrived in this City, on Sunday last, from Chicago, having run away from home, after stealing $1,000 from the father of Dillon, who is an employe of the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad. Chief of Police Kennedy, of Chicago, telegraphed to Inspector Dilks, and the lads were arrested on their arrival here. They were brought to Police Headquarters, and, on being searched, $478 were found concealed in their clothing. Chief of Police Kennedy, of Chicago, has been notified by telegraph, and, it is expected, will send on for the young thieves.

Probable Homicide.

A shooting affair came to light at Hoboken yesterday, which is likely to lead to fatal results. Two Germans, Anthony Koeppman and Herman Stammerman, both residents of Newark, met at the Railway House, on the meadows between Jersey City and Newark, on Saturday night. Both men were intoxicated and became quarrelsome. Koeppman struck Stammerman, and had a hot-iron in his hand. The latter had been shoeing a mare in the meadows, and had a loaded shot-gun with him. On being struck, he seized his gun and fired at Koeppman, wounding him, it is believed, fatally. Yesterday a warrant was secured from Justice Cutter, and Koeppman was locked up to await the result of the injuries inflicted on Stammerman.

The six cases of silks and velvets stolen from the United States public store in Greenwich-street do not amount in value to more than $7,000, instead of $180,000, as was absurdly stated by some of the morning papers yesterday. The train was not put upon the track until the following morning.
